CIA Dumping Its Castoffs In Canada?

RCMP To Check On CIA

Times News Services

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Warren Allmand Wednesday ordered the RCMP to investigate allegations that the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency operated illegally in Canada.

Allmand described as a "serious matter" allegations at the Commons justice committee by John Reynolds (PC-Burnaby-Richmond Delta).

With RCMP Commissioner Maurice Nadon beside him, Allmand said in effect that espionage is espionage, no matter which country is involved, and the RCMP security service "certainly will investigate."

If it was found that the CIA was operating illegally in Canada, the matter would be turned over to external affairs.

His comments came as Reynolds read portions of an affidavit from Virginio Gonzales, a Mexican who said he was recruited to spy for the CIA in 1959 and resigned in late 1974.

Gonzales alleges he was ordered to monitor the activities of a Howard Hughes employee, John Meier, in 1969 after Meier foiled an attempt to compromise Senator Edward Kennedy in Las Vegas.

The agent began personal surveillance of Meier in early 1972. In June that year, he learned Meier was in the Vancouver area.

He said the CIA was only one of the various sources utilized, and that is when Blackburn raised the point of Canada being used to "cool off" former CIA agents.

"... in the case of Quang and Bardecio it is clear that agencies such as the CIA are not going to provide information about the criminal activities of their former paid agents," he said.

There were reports, vehemently denied by Andras, that the CIA had pressed for the swift release of Gen. Quang from a refugee camp at Fort Chaffee, Ark. and that Canada may have taken him in as a favor to U.S. authorities.

Blackburn said that "cooling off" in Canada would keep former CIA employees "out of the eye of American Congressional committees."

He said outside the House that other names were "trickling in" to him.

Gen. Quang, who came to Canada under a special one-year minister's permit May 15, is now living in Montreal at the home of a former Saigon banker convicted last year of large-scale embezzlement at Vietnam's second-largest bank.

Meanwhile, Vietnamese students in Montreal are seeking the return of money Quang received from their relatives for exit visas that were not received, a member of the Vietnamese committee in Montreal aiding refugees said.

Trinh Quang Vinh said that when reports of the general's arrival spread, students began hunting him for the visa money.

He said some persons in South Vietnam paid as much as $5,000 or $10,000 for exit visas before the country's collapse.

OTTAWA — Canada seems to be becoming "a dumping ground" for shady persons connected with the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, an MP charged in Parliament Wednesday.

Derek Blackburn (NDP—Brant) raised the issue by asking Immigration Minister Robert Andras about the granting of landed immigrant status to an alleged "self-confessed torturer, bomber ... who was also a CIA-trained Uruguayan police officer."

He said Nelson Bardecio was also "an accessory to murder' and that he had been allowed into the country "under somewhat strange circumstances.'

Blackburn tied in this case with his attacks on Andras for allowing former South Vietnamese Lt. General Dang Van Quang into Canada — a man described publicly as "the most corrupt official in Vietnam."

Outside the House, Blackburn told reporters that Bardecio came to Toronto in 1972 from Uruguay "where he was working for the CIA."

According to him, Bardecio was ordered deported a year later but he appealed and the order was dropped, whereupon "he seems to have gone underground."

Blackburn asked Andras whether he would review his policy of "relying on foreign-based intelligence agencies such as the CIA for information concerning potential immigrants to Canada."

Andras replied that those who advise him on the "security of criminality in respect of applicants who come to Canada do not concentrate on the use of one or another agency."

Arms Deal Disrupted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. government analysts feel Egyptian president Anwar Sadat's figures were too high when he said that the Soviet Union had concluded a $12 billion arms deal with Libya in exchange for bases in the country. They feel reports of a $1 billion deal are more plausible but say even that amount of arms adds new tension in an area threatened by war.

Gov't Rules an End To Spending a Penny

The frustrations of pay toilets will soon be gone forever in British Columbia.

No longer will harried shoppers and irritated travellers have to fumble for a dime or be stuck with a grubby corner cubicle in public washrooms.

The Free Public Toilets Act, introduced in the legislature Wednesday to the delight of MLAs, will outlaw pay toilets or any charges for the use of toilets in public places.

"It's a serious bill ... it's just another fairness creeping into our system," explained Health Minister Dennis Cocke.

Pay toilets are "a great inconvenience", he said, and are also sexist, since women have to pay more often than men.

The bill has a great deal of universal support, he added.

It will not likely be small businessmen who are affected by the legislation, said Cocke, because it is usually big airports and hotels which have long rows of pay toilets.

The bill will likely come into effect within a few months and will mean owners will have to remove all existing locks from toilets.

Public places or buildings are described in the bill as: churches, theatres, auditoriums, amphitheatres, stadiums, commercial or industrial buildings, hospitals, railway cars, stations or depots, ferries and public parks or campsites.

Cocke said there is still some question, however, whether the federal government will be required to abide by the legislation in federal airports.

Plundering Since 1492

VANCOUVER (CP) — An Indian spokesman told the Commons - Senate committee on immigration that immigrants to North America have been raping, destroying and killing since the days of Columbus.

Derek Wilson, spokesman for the American Indian Movement and a member of the Haisla nation at Kitimat, told the committee Wednesday night to settle issues with the Indian people before any more immigrants are let into the country.

"All you white people are immigrants," he said. "You should ask the Indian people if you can stay.

"There has been a great rape of Mother Earth since the coming of the white man. You have destroyed the air we breath and the water we drink.

"We welcome the people here if they respect us, our philosphy and our earth. But you came, you raped, you destroyed and you killed.

"Settle the issues with the Indian people before you let any more in. I don't want money for my land but for all the sufferings and killings my people went through."

Ottawa File Lists Known Marijuana Smokers

OTTAWA (CP) — If you are known to have smoked marijuana or hashish, the odds are that your name is in a special file at the federal bureau of dangerous drugs here.

However, it's only for statistical purposes and privacy is strictly maintained, Dr. A. B. Morrison of the federal government's health protection branch, said today.

"We've been keeping records on drug abuse since the 1930's and haven't had a complaint from anyone that this information has been misused," Dr. Morrison said.

The file is called "known cannabis users in Canada" and contains 104,862 names, mostly accumulated in the 1960s and '70s. Separate files are kept for other kinds of drug abuse.

In 1974 there were 32,000 new files added for men and 4,500 for women. More than 80 per cent of those involved are under 24.

There are also four new files for persons 70 or older.

Dr. Morrison said the information for the files came from the government, the Addiction Research Foundation, pharmacies and hospitals.

"It shows us the extent of drug abuse, indicates trends and helps us develop adequate programs to fight it," Dr. Morrison said. "It is never given to law enforcement agencies."

He said the information was only released to the public in the form of statistics, but names could be given to doctors, treatment centres and parole boards.

"We often get calls from St. Joseph's Hospital in Hamilton to verify that people who come in for methadone treatment are known heroin addicts," Dr. Morrison said. "There is always the worry that they are just getting the stuff to sell on the streets."

Parole boards are informed because drug use is often a violation of parole, he said.

The Addiction Research Foundation says a federal pardon does not insure a file will be closed because pardon notices are not always sent to the dangerous drug bureau.

LIQUOR ACT REVAMPS LAWS

Flexible Hours for Drinking

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

Flexible drinking hours for all liquor establishments will be allowed in British Columbia under new legislation brought down today by Attorney-General Alex Macdonald.

The two new liquor bills will allow for wide-ranging changes in B.C.'s drinking habits including drinking in public places, much greater variety in the kinds of services provided by drinking establishments and tougher control over under-age drinking and disorderly conduct.

The legislation could lead to the sale of beer and wine in small grocery stores, but Macdonald made it clear at a press conference prior to introduction of the legislation that the government has not made a firm decision in that area.

The minister said a few weeks ago that sale of beer in grocery stores would be allowed in the new bills, but ttoday he appeared to be backing down and said it will be a matter for government and public discussion. (See also Pge 17).

He agreed it might never be brought in.

One of the major changes in liquor laws is the creation of a single liquor licence for all drinking establishments.

The liquor Administration Board will issue the general licence to all new establishments and outline on the back the rules and regulations applying to that specific outlet.

While it is not government policy to allow hard liquor in pubs, for example, said Macdonald, the LAB may decide that a pub in a remote area could serve all kinds of beverages.

Under the new general licence, sports stdaiums might also be allowed to serve liquor under regulations set forth by the LAB.

Hours of sale will be made more flexible under regulations to be passed later, said Macdonald, in keeping with the varied hours people now work.

A liquor board spokesman said the new regulations would likely specify a set number of hours an establishment could be open but would allow the owner to decide what those hours are.

An airport, for example, might want to have a lounge open throughout the night for passengers, he said.

Cabinet Split Covered Up

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Government ministers scrambled yesterday to paper over a suddenly visible crack in cabinet solidarity over the effect of wage increases on Canada's economy.

Source of the consternation was a speech by Labor Minister John Munro Tuesday, which ran directly opposite to recent statements by Prime Minister Trudeau and Finance Minister Turner.

Munro refuted statements that because Canada's wages and salaries are rising at a much faster rate than those in the U.S. it is jeopardizing Canada's competitive position.

He referred to the statements as "a prevailing myth."

Opposition parties delightedly hammered at Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp yesterday, asking what is the official government position.

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield quoted recent statements by both Trudeau and Turner which singled out the dangers inherent in Canada's faster rising wage rates.

As Sharp stumbled in search of an answer Stanfield asked what the newest statement does to the government's consensus program.

"Can the government properly present a consensus program to the people of Canada before it has achieved consensus in its own ranks," he demanded.

John Fraser (PC-Vancouver South) asked Munro if his statement meant the government now concedes wage demands are only a result of inflation and not a cause of it.

"No," replied Munro.

NDP financial critic Max Saltsman (Waterloo - Cambridge) took up the issue, asking Turner if he shared the Munro view that Canada's strike record is not nearly as bad as it is being made out to be.

Turner replied that he would be dealing with the subject in his June 23 budget, and that he would produce figures at that time.

Saltsman suggested it was a subject of considerable interest since these two opinions are floating around the country — but he agreed it might take some time for the ministers of labor and of finance to reach their own "consensus."

Rubbing a little salt into the cabinet crack the NDP member asked if the budget will be subject to a free vote whereby MPs do not have to vote along party lines.

B.C.-U.K. Talks June 23

Premier Barrett said Wednesday a June 23 meeting has been arranged with Prime Minister Harold Wilson, of Britain.

The British Information Services offices in Vancouver issued the following press release: "Contrary to a report which appeared in a Vancouver daily newspaper (The Sun) on 28 May, Premier Barrett will call on Prime Minister Wilson in London at 5:30 p.m. on Monday, 23 June.

"A reference to the British Consul-General in Vancouver, who is the British Government's representative in British Columbia, would have confirmed that the appointment was mutually arranged as long ago as 16 May."

Other meetings with British industrialists to discuss a proposed oil refinery in B.C. will take place during the visit, but Barrett said firm dates have not been set.

The exact nature of Barrett's discussions with the U.K. prime minister is not clear, but Barrett said he will be discussing technical and financial matters concerning the $350 million oil refinery.

The premier announced B.C. plans for a refinery last month, however as yet a secure oil supply has not been guaranteed and the exact location is not decided.

ICBC Way Clear For Licences

Motor Vehicle Branch and government agent offices around B.C. will resume full licensing services, despite the continuing Insurance Corporation of B.C. strike.

Transport Minister Bob Strachan said Wednesday the B.C. Government Employees' Union and the Public Service Commission have studied the stiuation and decided there is no conflict in the government continuing its services.

When ICBC's 1,200 employees first went on strike last week, Strachan said government offices would not be able to provide services which would involve automobile insurance policies.

Now, he said, offices will issue new drivers' licences and insurance certificates as well as the whole range of licence plates and driving licences.

Full services will be offered at the Motor Vehicles Branch offices as well as the 43 government agents' outlets.

A government spokesman said today there has been no interruption in normal services offered by the sub-agencies around the province and those services will continue.

He said the continuation of Motor Vehicle Branch services represents no conflict in the ICBC strike because ICBC did not normally handle drivers' certificates.

Branches will not write Autoplan insurance premiums.

Strachan said the directive sent to police officers around the province instructing them not to charge drivers found without valid drivers' certificates has not been rescinded at this time.

He did not indicate whether the order would be withdrawn.

I'm Fed Up with Life: Student

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — A 16-year-old student, whose last note to his parents said he was "fed up with life . . . I am going out to eliminate people," killed his teacher and a fellow student, then committed suicide, in a shooting rampage at his school Wednesday.

Michael Slobodian, a Grade 11 student, went to Centennial secondary school in this city northwest of Toronto and killed Margaret Wright, 25, his English and art teacher, John Slinger, 17, and wounded 13 other students before turning a semi-automatic rifle on himself.

Chief Douglas Burrows of Peel regional police said Slobodian entered the men's washroom of the school at about 11:30 a.m. armed with two rifles-.44-calibre and .22-calibre hidden in a guitar case — and fired at random, killing a student and seriously wounding another.

Chief Burrows said Slobodian then left the washroom and fired in the immediate area, wounding two male students, then fired in the general direction of a home economics' classroom, wounding two female students and one male student.

He proceeded through a first-floor hallway and fired at random in the area of the school's cafeteria, afflicting minor gunshot wounds to six students, and turned towards the art room, fatally shooting Mrs. Wright and seriously wounding two male students.

Then "the gunman turned the gun on himself, inflicting a fatal head wound," the police report said.

Dona Slobodian, 18, sister of Michael, said that "he was perfecdy fine. There was nothing wrong with him this morning."

She said her brother, before returning to school from a morning break, wrote a note that he loved his family and was going to kill himself and "eliminate people."

She said Michael left upset because Mrs. Wright had telephoned to say her brother had missed another English class. Dona said he hated English classes.

DOUBLE WIN, BUT NOT FOR RUNNERS

KIMBERLEY (CP) — William Dupuis went home with two new cars after a bingo Saturday night, but the organizers of the event left empty-handed.

Dupuis won the cars for his card with the winning combination of numbers in two successive bingo games. Bill Colthorp, vice-president of the Kimberley Rotary Club, sponsors of the event, said he was flabbergasted with Dupuis taking both the cars when there were 8,000 other cards.

And Colthorp was also surprised to learn Wednesday that the event which grossed over $17,000 narrowly broke even.

As a result, Colthorp said the club will be unable to make any contribution to a $1 million fund for a special care home — the reason the bingo was scheduled.

15TH EXTORTION NETS $30,000

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Provincial Police estimated $30,000 was taken early today in the 15th extortion on financial institutions in Quebec in eight months.

Two attempts to extort $150,000 from Montreal banks each failed Wednesday when money was not picked up from designated drop-off-points.

Police said Roger Patenaude, a Caisse Populaire manager, and his wife were held in their suburban Chateauguay Centre home for four hours late Wednesday night and early today by two men armed with a small calibre revolver.

One man left at 2 a.m., taking the keys to the nearby Caisse Populaire. He telephoned his partner at the manager's house after he had taken the money, police said. The second man left the manager and his wife unharmed.

In one of the unsuccessful extortion attempts Wednesday, a $150,000-dollar payment left in a telephone both by the manager of a downtown branch of the Bank of Montreal was retrieved when extortionists did not appear.

In the second incident Wednesday, police were alerted by 20-year-old Claude Rivard, who had been tied up with his mother and two brothers after thieves broke into the Rivard home shortly after 4 a.m.

VGH Fears Shutdown From LRB Ruling

Victoria General Hospital has appealed a Labor Relations Board ruling, saying that for the first time it raises the spectre of a total hospital shutdown in the event of labor strife.

The LRB ruled earlier this month that five of the hospital's department heads were eligible for membership in the Health Sciences Association, a union which represents paramedical hospital staff and has about 2,500 members across the province.

The hospital had argued that seven of its department heads should be excluded because they were management personnel. The board agreed on two positions but ruled the other five were eligible because while they performed some mangement functions, it was not their "primary function."

There is no indication from the LRB yet whether it will hear the appeal. The hospital wants the entire board to hear its argument against the ruling made by a three-man panel of the board. The LRB has in the past indicated there are few grounds on which it is prepared to hear appeals.

The appeal comes at the same time as the Health Sciences Association in convention last weekend erased from its constitution a clause which precluded members going on stike.

Mike O'Prien, personnel director at Victoria General, said that if the board ruling stands and an HSA strike came about, the hospital would be unable to provide even basic diagnostic services and would in effect be shut down.

In its appeal, the hospital is not contesting the case of the social services department head. The posts at issue are department heads of medical records, pharmacy, phsiotherapy and laboratory technology and the appeal brief includes letters in support from the people holding these positions.

The LRB in its decision said it intended the ruling to stand as a precedent-setting decision for similar situations across the province.

The hospital, represented by Brian Smith, is arguing the LRB ruling changes the role and functions of the department heads involved "and as a practical consequence the hospital will become more bureaucratized and less effectively run."

The department heads involved exercise in varying degrees the functions of hiring, firing, promoting, evaluating, organizing and controlling the work of those under them but will now become mere supervisors, the appeal brief says.

"As members of the union . . . they (cannot) be effectively responsible for disciplining and firing.

"In the assignment of jobs, the pressure will be upon them to base their decisions on seniority — a legitimate union concept in certain areas of employee relations — but a principle which would give rise to inefficiency in the day to day running of the department.

"The other alternative facing the department heads would be to become poor union members, placing the interest of an efficient department above the interests of their fellow union members."

The appeal argues that the LRB ruling made an error in law, one of the grounds on which the LRB says it will hear an appeal, when it said all paramedic hospital department heads in B.C. are "employees" in the absence of special or unusual circumtances.

Gov't-Made Eye Glasses?

The provincial government may move into the production of eyeglasses to keep "oppressive prices" down, Health Minister Dennis Cocke said today.

One solution, he said, is giving financial assistance to a business in the private sector to hold down the price.

Speaking during debate of his department's estimates in the legislature the health minister said recent 20 per cent increases by Imperial Optical is contributing to needlessly high prices.

"There has to be a better way, especially in cases where families are facing bills for eyeglasses for as many as five children."

Cocke promises to keep "soldiering on" and called for federal government to continue its review of optometrics in Canada which he said was going full-tilt before the election but as soon as election was over "we heard nothing more."

Later in debate he said he was still awaiting a department report on the feasibility of establishing a dental care program for children.

Indians End Nanaimo Occupation

NANAIMO — About 50 Nitinat and Port Alberni Indians have ended their three-day occupation of the Indian affairs department office here.

Spokesman Charlie Thompson said the work will be taken over by the South Vancouver Island Indian Federation, but there was no indication if the new group intends to continue the occupation.

William Cook, district supervisor for the indian affairs department, said the office staff was to return to work today. They had been off work since early Monday when the occupation began.

He also said the Indians involved in the sit-in left the office in excellent condition.

WOMAN JAILED

A 22-year-old Vancouver woman was sentenced Wednesday to 18 months in jail for pointing a pistol at Walter Edward Currie.

Christina Hildebrandt had pleaded guilty earlier and was to have been sentenced May 7 but she failed to appear. A warrant for her arrest was issued and she was brought to court Wednesday.

The Crown had earlier withdrawn a two-count charge of forcible confinement against her in an incident at Executive House last November when two Colwood RCMP officers were hogtied and held for two hours.

Liquor Act

The legislation will set up a listing committee to decide what products should be available in B.C. liquor stores.

The committee is designed to be responsible to the demands of people and private citizens will be appointed to it along with LAB representatives.

Restaurants will also be able under the new legislation to choose their own wines for their establishments. By allowing restaurants to order directly from wineries, said Macdonald, establishments will have more individuality.

The new legislation will allow the establishment of agency stores in remote areas where no government liquor stores can realistically be established, he said.

The ministers said the bill will be tougher in respects to minors drinking in licensed establishments.

There will be greater penalties for the minors themselves and police will be allowed to instantly suspend the licences of operators.

BEIRUT (AP) — Street fighting tapered off today and Premier Rashid Karami ordered security forces to kill snipers who do not surrender. Karami made clear that he will not wait to form a new cabinet before cracking down on the private armies that have terrorized this Lebanese city for nine days.

Community News Round-Up

A grant of $9,000 to employ four students to run a summer program has been received by the BLANSHARD TENANTS ASSOCIATION.

Community development worker Lou Jordison said "we had been hoping for a larger grant because out of the funds must come transportation costs."

There are approximately 475 children in Blanshard Courts and another 100 or so come from nearby areas who participate in the programs.

Jordison said she is extremely pleased with the little things now happening in the community . . . such as a chap who volunteered to talk to some of the goys.

She said she is also hopeful the Greater Victoria School Board will support the tenant's request to place a trailer on a temporary basis on Blanshard Elementary grounds to be used by the tenants and the students running the summer program.

She said the idea is supported by the principal of the school and now needs only board approval.

On the negative side, Jordison said it appears the provincial department of human resources will not provide funds necessary to operate a community centre. For months now negotiations have been going on to purchase the Winifred. Clarke Centre for the handicapped.

"But there is such a shortage of funds right now we can't count too much on chances of us getting the funds. If there is no government funding then we can't operate and carry the load ourselves."

In other happenings in the area, the Blanshard elementary fair last week was a huge financial success with the school and school auxiliary raising about $2,000.

Sharon Davies and the girls she organized into a baseball team are now planning on how to raise funds to pay for a Vancouver trip.

Can't afford a vacation for yourself and the children?

Well, COMMUNITY ACTION is making it possible for 60 persons to spend a week at the Y's Camp Thunderbird . . . a 1,000 acre playground for swimming, fishing, hiking and anything else the vacationers can come up with.

Mary Davidson said any child 12 years of age and under is eligible and that a parent or parent substitute must accompany the children.

She said today there have been many enquiries and about 12 are really interested and will likely sign up for the camp.

The camp is from Aug. 24 to the 30th and a counsellor from the Y will be on hand.

"It will really be a family holiday for the week and it's aimed at those on welfare or low incomes who really can't afford to go on a vacation," added Mary.

Community Action has paid the camp rental of $275 and this will be shared by those attending.

Mary said it should work out to $10 or less for adults and less for the child or children.

If interested call Mary at 386-8578 for further information.

The last public hearing in East Sooke to debate the proposed Sooke community plan will be held June 7 at Glenairley House.

Grace Horgan, a member of the SOOKE ADVISORY PLANNING BOAD, said she "urgently urges all interested people to attend and state their views."

The meeting was called by Capital Regional Board representative Ron Dumont and to hear the views of residents and property owners.

The meeting starts at 7:30.

Previously there has been meetings on the plan at the Sooke community hall.

A sewage outfall in the Albert Head area is definitely under study by the Capital Region staff.

Shirley Wilde, president of the ALBERT HEAD RATEPAYERS told the annual meeting this week she received a letter from Jim Campbell, chairman of the regional board, outlining the region's stand.

For the past year Albert Head ratepayers have sent letters to the region and other agencies opposing any outfall in their area.

The meeting also reaffirmed their stand wanting the area to retain the rural atmosphere and oppose any large development which would destroy this.

The association also named an ad hoc committee to work with the executive in opposing the $5 million expansion plan at William Head prison.

The committee is expected to get together within the week so that their protest will be discussed before Parliament recesses for a summer break.

The nominating committee's slate of candidates to fill the five vacancies on the board were approved. Candidates were Mrs. Gwen Day, Don Ingalls, R. H. Ruppel, K. Roach and R. Williams.

An immediate increase of 15 per cent in social assistance payments is a proposal sent to the B.C. human resources branch by the BLANSHARD-DOWNTOWN ADVISORY COMMITTEE.

"The cost of living has gone up 12 per cent in the past year and people on the assistance program are finding it hard to cope with the monies they now get," says community worker Lou Jordison.

The advisory committee is also asking that payments be tied to the cost of living index . . . "same thing as now granted old age pensioners" adds Jordison.

Also discussed was the probation department's pilot project in the Blanshard area where probation officer David Turner spends a certain amount of his time getting to know offenders and their families.

Jordison said the project is proving to be a huge success and the board would like to see it expanded.

Central Mortgage and Housing Commission took its RRAP program to the residents in VIC WEST but the people didn't show up at the first "store front" effort by the government agency.

Victor Virak, in charge of the Residential Rehabilitation Assistance Program, which makes loans up to $5,000 at low interest rates to home and apartment block owners to rehabilitate their units, said today only a couple showed up.

This Saturday his assistant, Al Clark will be manning the "store front office" — the human resources office on Alston — from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Streets, traffic, postal sorting station, garbage, tennis courts and elections igligted te annual meeting of te ROYAL OAK RATEPAYER'S ASSOCIATION this week.

Mrs. Ruth Clay, elected president, said it was a successful meeting with a lot of newcomers showing up.

She explained to the group what is happening with the multi-million dollar sorting station proposed for the Glanford area.

On roads, they discussed the completion of McKenzie Avenue between Glanford and Carey and the group was split on whether they want the municipality to make Mann Avenue a through street or to keep it blocked off in the middle.

On garbage pickups, the group said it would support any reasonable suggestion from Saanich council if the move will help to hold down tax rates.

Mrs. Clay said the association would like to see tennis courts built at either Glanford or Northridge elementary schools. At present there are two courts at Royal Oak and two on Marigold which are too far for youngsters to travel for a game.

"The courts would be a tremendous help for those in the middle areas," said Mrs. Clay. The association also went on record as fully supporting the plan to form a federation of all community and ratepayer associations in Saanich.

Named as Royal Oak representatives to the federation were Dick Gauthier and Brian Wright.

In the elections, Wright was elected vice-president, Gauthier as treasurer and members at large are Bob Harman, John Clay, Ed. Brown and Mrs. Shirley Kishkan.

Volunteers Needed To Boost Program

By PETER MEDWID
Times Staff

The volunteer program depends entirely on the community — people to volunteer "and people to call us if they need help of any type."

Phil Rogers, who has been in charge of the JAMES BAY COMMUNITY OFFICE'S volunteer program since May 1, has some definite plans on what he would like to see happen in the community.

"One thing I would like to see is that there will be enough volunteers to cover every type of problem that crops up."

At present there are 40 volunteers with another 50 who deliver the James Bay News once a month.

"We have a unique situation in that about 50 per cent of the volunteers are seniors and the rest 35 and under with very few volunteers in the middle age area.

"It's unique because we do have a lot of seniors who can and do help the elderly in the community."

Rogers said that in regard to the older people, there is a volunteer team of five who visit patients in James Bay Lodge and he hopes to expand this program to cover all rest homes in James Bay.

Also on the list of proposals for those in rest homes, Rogers hopes to launch bus tours with everyone sharing the costs.

At present there are three volunteers who take those without transportation and drive them to get groceries, appointments at doctors or other places.

"We desperately need another six to eight people with cars who would be willing to help out in this area."

As examples, Rogers said one of the driver volunteers takes a child from the James Bay Community School twice a week for play therapy at another centre.

There is a chap who looks for low rental housing and used furniture for those who are unable to afford them. volunteers who visit people once or twice a week on a regular basis; and volunteers who are there to help in any way they can.

Rogers said he would like to see an active "Big Brother and Big Sister" program working out of the community office. There is a chap who takes kids out and a girl who took a pre-school course and is interested in the Big Sister idea.

Other ideas Rogers is hoping to develop, if enough volunteers come forward, is tutoring students — elementary to high school level.

A lay counselling service is available. Bill Norton of the Integrated Services of the department of human resources gave a course with 12 attending and these people are now working out of the community office.

ROGERS
. . . needs the help

Rogers said he works closely with the Victoria Volunteer Bureau and there will be training sessions for new volunteers to introduce them to the idea and what can be expected of them.

The volunteers are sent out if anyone needs help and also the office gets requests from the public health nurse, school and from the department of human resources staff.

The James Bay volunteer bureau started last year and Rogers believes residents "will really see the program grow within the next three months."

All he needs is more volunteers and the number to call is 382-2161, or see Rogers at the community office in the Glenshiel Hotel on Douglas.

Refinery Questions

Premier Dave Barrett's announcement that he is going to England in June to discuss technical and financial aspects of a proposed B.C. government oil refinery with Prime Minister Harold Wilson is a bit puzzling. Asking the United Kingdom to put up some of the cash for the $350 million Barrett petroleum complex would seem akin to soliciting in a hobo jungle for $100 bills.

The U.K. government has a successful oil company in British Petroleum — it's one of the major partners in the Prudhoe Bay development in Alaska, and part-financier of the trans-Alaska pipeline — but does it seem likely that impoverished Mother England will have much spare cash for a little oil refinery way off in the colonies?

Perhaps before the premier jets off — on his fourth global junket in three years we note — to tell 'arold all the details of the latest pioneering effort of the socialists on Canada's farthest frontier, maybe he'll let us in on a few.

All the great unwashed know for sure is that a refinery will be built — don't know where, don't know when — if Alberta gives assurances of adequate crude oil supplies. Three sites are being actively considered, although the lower Fraser Valley seems to be the only logical choice.

One cabinet minister has said it has to be built there — and the government's activities in buying up land and options on more land in the area seem to back him up — because the other sites at Clinton and Merritt would involve uneconomic transport costs in bringing refined products to market in Vancouver.

Besides the problem of crude oil supplies, there also seems to be a marketing problem. Who's going to buy the output of the government's 100,000-barrel-a-day refinery when existing Lower Mainland refineries already have a combined capacity of about 140,000 barrels a day and Standard Oil plans to expand by 25,000 barrels?

What about the claims by Imperial Oil, biggest of the oil companies in B.C., that the project will cost at least $500 million and will be a waste of money as present capacity is sufficient to supply future demand? It's a biased opinion, of course, but there's been no reply from the government.

And what of environmental hazards? Several cabinet ministers, led by Education Minister Eileen Dailly, last year led a fight against allowing Shell to expand its refinery capacity in Burnaby, but what will a B.C. government refinery —bigger by far than anything existing today — do to the tranquil Fraser Valley in Surrey and Langley?

Barrett stated Roberts Bank was ruled out as a site because the ecological risks were too high, but how about letting the public see the actual environmental impact report on the Fraser Valley site prepared by the B.C. Petroleum Corp. and allowing us to judge for ourselves?

It would be helpful, too, if the politicians and the civil servants of the BCPC and the provincial energy commission could co-ordinate their policy pronouncements. Some bureaucrats say the refinery will be accompanied by a large petrochemical complex, but some cabinet ministers are equally definite that only an oil refinery will be built.

Some answers are due the taxpayers of British Columbia before any deals are made with the British prime minister.

Promote Wine Too

After years of stalling by two provincial governments, the NDP administration finally decided to allow small grocery stores to sell beer. Except for a minority who rightly worry that increased alcohol outlets mean more drunkeness, the public generally accepted the idea as a forward step in a society where 80 percent of the people, for better or worse, drink alcoholic beverages.

Now we see the government is considering beer-only sales outlets to take the pressure off government liquor stores. Would not the same result be achieved by licensing corner stores to sell beer? Separate government run beer stores will be redundant. Not only will they be costly to rent or construct, but it means hiring more staff. This would be an entirely unnecessary cost to the taxpayers of B.C.

In its ardor to disseminate beer the government chooses to ignore other beverages on which it has a monopoly. As Pat McGeer (Independent-Vancouver-Point Grey) pointed out the liquor branch sells 325 varieties of B.C. wine and only 28 varieties from elsewhere in Canada.

When it comes to foreign wines, there is a better listing in Newfoundland. It is easy to forgive a few gestures towards protecting a native industry, but when more are listed from one B.C. company than all foreign countries combined, it is going too far.

Toronto writer George Bain, author of an excellent book on wine summed it up this way: "Considering their number, wealth and frequent pretensions to at least a veneer of sophistication, British Columbians accept an offering of fine wines that would be derisory in Ulán Bator."

The provincial government has promised things will improve. But if it goes about the improving the wine list in the same manner it proposes to push beer we have our doubts.

PETER THOMSON

One in 67 Works for Ottawa

OTTAWA — There is genuine concern, even among some of Finance Minister John Turner's key advisers, that his upcoming budget will be too expansionary.

Turner clearly must try to choose a course between restrictive and stimulative extremes when he brings down his new budget. Perhaps the most pertinent guidelines will be how much things have changed since his Nov. 18 budget. In some respects the changes in economic problems are slight.

At that time Turner said the first essential was to sustain demand. And he warned that the action he was proposing that night "will not bite in economic terms until well into next year.

"Politicians, journalists, even some economists, are often inclined to underestimate the time lags in the impact of economic policy," he observed.

There is plenty of statistical evidence to show that consumer demand tapered off rather badly — some would say disastrously — in the first quarter of 1975. But, time lags being what they are, the question is whether consumer confidence is recovering.

Housing Weak Link

In November, Turner claimed it was necessary to "do all that we can to restrain the growth of government expenditures, particularly those that do not contribute directly to an increased supply of goods and services."

In this regard, the government failed miserably. But it was a noble objective and must be reiterated with some intention of following through. A 16-per-cent increase in government expenditures (some figure it 24 per cent), without a noticeable increase in production of goods and services, can only lead to reduced national productivity — and more inflation.

When we reach a point that there is a federal public servant for every 67 Canadians, and an even greater number of provincial and municipal public servants, the country is in serious danger of being over-governed.

Another objective of Turner's November budget was to apply stimuli "selectively" to buttress weak points of the economy.

The most obvious weak point in the Canadian economy for the past six months has been housing. While the November budget provided something of a stimulus in this area, it has not yet taken hold. Further action is clearly required, or Canada will face a serious housing shortage.

There have been all kinds of proposals to help housing, from allowing a part of municipal taxes and mortgage interest as an income tax deduction, to financial help to municipalities to provide serviced land for housing, to more generous subsidization of mortgage interest by the federal government. Turner, obviously, must be looking at these options.

Another danger point, in Turner's view, is maintenance of private capital investment to provide job opportunities of the future. To achieve this the minister may increase withholding taxes to reduce capital out-flows, may provide a form of investment tax credit, and certainly retain investment incentives for individuals that were provided in the November budget.

. . . asking rhetorical questions

Given the current high rate of unemployment in Canada, it would be politically difficult for Turner to make his budget more restrictive than the November one — even if economists are generally agreed that Canada's economic recovery will start later this year without further stimulus.

Turner must keep in mind that natural gas and oil prices are due to rise very soon, a development that will add to everyone's living costs and will increase costs of Canadian manufactured goods. Thus, there is an element of unavoidable inflation in store and the minister must make provision for it.

At the same time he must acknowledge that Canada still has the fastest growing labor force in the industrialized world, and economic expansion of about five per cent a year is necessary just to keep unemployment from growing. In the longer term, however, such rapid expansion may not be necessary.

Andre Raynauld, chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, pointed out some extremely significant long-term developments to the Senate finance committee earlier this month.

Raynauld noted, for example, that Canada's labor force has been growing at a rapid rate due to emergence of the post-war baby boom into the work force, increased participation by women in the labor force, and immigration.

Increases in the participation rate can not be expected to be as great in the future. Also, the population bulge resulting from the baby boom will, within a few years, be absorbed into the labor force. As a consequence by 1980 the inflow of Candian-born workers into the labor market will be declining. Thus, there could be, within a few years, less need for rapid expansion of capital investment — or a greater need for immigrants. Raynauld also noted a dramatic decline in the number of farmers. With a new world emphasis on food requirements, the finance minister might well consider measures that would discourage the flight of farmers from the land.

Incomes Slowing

But perhaps the most significant point Raynauld made was that per capita real incomes have been rising in Canada at a rate of about six per cent a year — with half of the gain attributable to increasing participation of women in the labor force.

This trend is not expected to continue.

Put another way, Canadians are going to have to get used to less dramatic increases in their living standards.

But then, that comment too can be found in Turner's November budget.

He noted then that food and energy had been cheap and abundant. "That has all changed in the space of a few short years."

"Should we live as high as we do?" Turner asked. "Should we waste as much as we do?"

It was a good question. Unfortunately, the question has not got through to most Canadians. And perhaps the most significant portion of Turner's budget will be whether he tries to get the message through.

Monkeying Around

As far as I can see, the free enterprise system, in perfect harmony with the natural order, has done a magnificent job in raising and freeing mankind from feudal authoritarianism. Now we are threatened by the sheer numbers of the uninformed who believe every problem can be solved by the mass vote, which, as Plato said, will always vote for more than the state can afford.

Production must come before distribution and the mass vote has never even considered this vital fact. A band of apes or monkeys could by accident trip a few levers and set a locomotive in motion, but what happens after that? Karl Marx said capitalism has provided the means to a socialist society, but did not say how people totally unskilled in the management of an industrial society could operate an industrial complex. It is hard enough for those who built the locomotive to manage it. How can people with no experience even hope to learn how to manage it before the crash?

To paraphrase Edith Cavell, good intentions are not enough. The road to hell is paved with good intentions and only the greedy and envious (while living comfortably on the wealth they have expropriated) pretend they know more than those who built the industrial machine which has done so well in freeing mankind from backbreaking labor from dawn to dark. The moral is don't let monkeys attempt to run a locomotive. — M. P. Paine, 3620 Quadra.

Tainted Money?

May I respectfully respond to Corner Store's letter, headed, doubtless by the editor Nó Fortunes Made in your May 22 issue?

Firstly, I express my feeling that a "blow beneath the belt" has been made by naming only one of the bodies of persons about whom the criticism is made. Surely when charges are made, particularly in the tone featured in the second paragraph of the article, it is only fair play that all the alleged participants charged should be named, unless some, of course, are a figment of heresy.

Corner Store uses the term "it is a fact" in making assertions that neighborhood stores are bypassed by these alleged bodies in favor of major food chains, which incidentally, are employers of a large number of our fellow citizens. He also suggests that corner stores are used as a convenience for various other purposes, which cause the reader to assume that he does not regard as being compatible with business productivity. However, in an almost immediate "turn around", Corner Stores asserts the benign statement "we don't mind being used as a convenience store, and that we wouldn't be in business if we didn't enjoy it, and besides it's a living."

Two salient points are made here, and we must concede that the "convenience" experience is a matter about which Corner Store has unquestionable knowledge, and which he infers that he enjoys. Good for him.

On the other hand, to have "it is a fact" knowledge of the business pursuits of the organizations and communities that Corner Store appears to have in mind, could indicate the essentials of intimate and first-hand surveillance, which I suggest is hardly within his province.

It is my privilege to keep the books of a Salvation Army institution in Victoria, and from my first-hand knowledge, I am able to assure Corner Store that over 50 per cent of provision purchases during 1974 were made at stores other than the major chains.

Corner Store mentions increased commodity and essential services costs, and I am sure that he realizes these are also applicable to organizations and communities, with a particular burden upon non-profit welfare organizations.

Corner Store has previously mentioned his corner store business is a "living," and then proceeds to intimate that the provincial attorney-general "is trying to keep us alive," and this is going to be done by selling beer.

At this point, may I respectfully suggest that it could be evident that Corner Store is probably not conversant with statements made down through the years by prominent persons of the North American continent, including many members of the judiciary, radio commentators, etc. that alcoholism in any form is the major cause of much crime, and some even suggest that its impact on the youth of the land is even greater than the very sad drug addiction situation that is all around us.

Consequently, I really wonder if Corner Store was really in earnest when he stated "to sell beer to minors and create social disorders is ridiculous." I fear that Corner Store has little intimate knowledge of its devastating effects upon lives, home and families. After over 45 years of experience dealing with fellow citizens whose lives have been blighted by it, I am convinced that making any alcoholic beverage more available, by any method whatsoever, is wrong, wrong, wrong.

I find it difficult to believe that Corner Store would really wish to bask

BEER
. . . profits from sale tainted?

in the profit from beer sales, while realizing that indirectly he could be contributing to the proven sorrow that could come to persons to whom the product has been made so much more easily available. Could it be that such profit could be termed "tainted money?"

Would Corner Store accept the idiom: "Devil take the indulgent, as long as I receive the profits? — Concerned Citizen.

Bikeway Study

Many readers have requested more information on the regional bikeway study now being coordinated by the Community Planning Association of Canada.

We write to advise that copies of the prospectus are available to residents of the capital district.

There is only one charge: your opinion.

After you've read it, let us know what you think. Give us your criticisms, your ideas, your point of view.

The regional bikeway committee will be meeting shortly and will base its work on this prospectus. It will issue periodic progress reports thoughout the summer. Because of Greater Victoria's worsening traffic problems, priority will be given to commuter route development.

If you'd like a copy, and you're willing to pay the "price" we charge, then please drop a line and join the growing movement for safe cycling.

We'll both be glad you did. — Charles Barber, Chairman, Regional Bikeway Study, Community Planning Association of Canada, P.O. Box 633, Victoria V8W 2P3.

Disaster Cries

With the election of August 30, 1972, British Columbia turned a historic corner that had long been foreshadowed, and changed its direction. In 1915, strong protests at the rip-offs in public resources came from the Ministerial Union of the Lower Mainland by its spokesman, Rev. A. E. Cooke, as we were reminded by the Times on April 30. Cooke was a Congregational (and United) churchman and a life-long Christian Socialist.

The movement gained further strength principally with the high quality record of the opposition CCF-NDP since 1933. Its meritorious proposals were frequently adopted by other administrations. Major instances were public hospitalization, medicare and B.C. Hydro.

B.C. voters approved such faithful, constructive opposition by giving the NDP the reins of government. In the judgment of many, it is the most responsible government the province has experienced.

Unlike the new Social Credit government after the 1952 election, it did not flounder for many months but forged ahead with a legislative program. Those who recall those earlier days cannot but appreciate the competence with which the present government has taken charge. Due to impatience with past delays, it may have worked too fast, but its large-scale gains have been remarkable.

Neither this nor any other government is free from mistakes. Some are new, some are inherited. But British Columbians have never been better cared for than by the present cabinet. Its social vision has placed it among the leading administrations of the continent.

On the other hand, the official opposition has been unusually weak. Most constructive criticism has come from the smaller groups, with the smallest doing best.

Despite the unattractive Socred display, the opposition believes B.C. voters yearn to unseat the NDP. It could well be mistaken, for with all the social gains we have made, our good economic position, and the promise of advances to come, government support could well have risen. Is it their underlying fear that this is so, that prompts the Socreds and the dissident Liberals to be so hysterically unsound in their attacks?

Any unity for the people really exists under the NDP, and unity in free-enterprise terms could be little but a cloak for a coalition of self-interest. Approval of the acquisitive society tacitly confess this.

British Columbians should not be misled by disaster cries from the opposition arising because of the pains of disintegration in their ranks.— Harold T. Allen, 2140 Kings Road.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of May 29, 1915

When the lighthouse tender Quadra returns to port towards the end of next week, the new system of lighting the British Columbia coastline will be complete in operation. Despite strenuous opposition from coast mariners, the marine department of the Dominion government has carried out its plans of having red lights to starboard and white lights to port when northbound. Criticism has been voiced because white lights are visible for half again as far as a red light, especially in the mists and wet weather prevalent on the B.C. coast.

By Their Cult Books They Are Known

By EMILY FISHER

A bestseller list may be a shaky post upon which to hang an historian's judgment, for it is as short-livied as an audience's attention span. Yet such lists are the social historian's tools, for they are records of the pop sensibility.

The bestsellers on U.S. college campuses in the mid-to-late 60s were The Prophet by Kahil Gibran, Siddartha by Herman Hesse, Slaughterhouse Five by Kurt Vonnegut Jr, and J. R. R. Tolkien's Lord of the Rings trilogy. They were cult books, says Roger Rosenblatt, director of education at the National Endowment for Humanities, stories of heroes, high deeds and of hope. They were, he recalls, seized upon by the rebel youth culture and shared as symbols of their strike against the settled, grown-up world.

In 1975, for the first time in ten years, the bestsellers on the college campuses — and with the general public — are move or less the same. The Chronicle of Higher Education's March survey of 150 college bookstores across the U.S. which include both hard cover and paperbacks found the bestsellers to be: 1. Fear of Flying by Erica Jong; 2. Jaws by Peter Benchley; 3. The Joy of Sex by Alex Comfort; 4. Working by Studs Terkel; 5. All the President's Men by Carl Bernstein and Bob Woodward; 6. The Bermuda Triangle by Charles Berlitz; 7. Zen and the Art of Motorcycle Maintenance by Robert Pirsig; 8. The Guinness Book of World Records edited by Norris McWhirter and Ross McWhirter; 9. Watership Down by Richard Adams, and 10. The Ascent of Man by Jacob Bronowski.

While the cult books of the late '60 reflect the counterculture's search, the bestsellers of 1975 stand as a tombstone to that search. While the late '60s list proclaimed the generation gap, the 1975 list, sociologists and educators agree, tells of the closing of that gap. It tells how after 10 years, says Harvard sociologist David Riesman, the two generations have met in world-weariness, resignation and quiet desperation.

"What stands out strongest in this list," says Alan Purves, professor of English education at the University of Illinois, "is the loss of idealism, the lack of heroes. Each book is in some way myth-shattering. Fear of Flying shatters the '60s myths about the sanctity of human relationships. Sex becomes purely physical for Jong. The same goes for Joy of Sex. Working violates the glamor of work — work is gruesome. The Guinness book does the opposite — in it the world of play becomes a world of freaks. And while All the President's Men perpetuates the myth of the fearless reporter, it is more about the destruction of the monolith. These books simply fragment the late 60s hopes in the possibilty of a new world."

They project, he says, a jaded, joyless vision, and they have caught on with an audience apparently turned as jaded and joyless.

"In 1969 it was anathema for students to read establishment bestsellers," says Rosenblatt. "The point was to found a separate culture. What you see now is that counter-culture transmogrified into the culture itself."

SEGAL
. . . escape

The transition was sudden, he says, "like a shotgun triple play." It came though crisis and compromise and is mirrored in the rises and falls of campus bestsellers.

In 1970, as radical youth movements tottered, stumbled and splintered into hundreds of bickering sects, The Greening of America by Charles Reich, Future Shock by Alvin Toffler, Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Sex by Dr. David Reuben. The Sensuous Woman by "J", Knots by R. D. Laing, and Love Story by Erich Segal became the campus bestsellers.

While the preoccupation with sex was hardly restricted to the counterculture, says Alvin Astin, professor of Higher Education at UCLA, the appearance of the Reuben and "J" books testified to the way radical politics was somewhat diverted into sexual politics and defused.

The Toffler book bolstered leftist pessimism with somber talk of the coming apocalypse as did Laing's message that schizophrenia was the norm and society's fault to boot. Reich, on the other hand, promised a new world with a centre that held. And Segal offered escape in some neverland that nobody was old enough to remember, but it was a happy fancy.

These books (except for Segal), says Riesman, at least urged a sort of activism. The counterculture still treasured its dreams.

By 1973, however, the Chronicle's list was dominated by pop self-help books and spiritual guidebooks: I'm OK, You're OK; A Guide to Transactional Analysis by Thomas A. Harris, A Separate Reality by Carlos Castaneda, Teachings of Don Juan by Castaneda, Journey to Ixtlan by Castaneda, The Whole Earth Catalogue edited by Stewart Brand, Chariots of the Gods? by Erich Von Daniken, Jonathan Livingston Seagull by Richard Bach.

The collective search to be saved, says Purves, had become a personal search for purity. Protest had been abandoned, the disillusioned had turned mystic and trekked to hundreds of gurus and perfect Masters, to swamis and lamas, to Jesus, Baba Ram Dass and the Maharishi, and into the welter of spiritual havens scattered about the social terrain — Arica, Scientology, Transcendental Meditation, Macrobiotic communes.

Now, two years later, the occult has disappeared from the campus bestseller list. For the generation of campus mystics, says Purves, has been succeeded by a generation of cynics.

In the late 60s the point was to save. In 1972-3 the point was to be saved. And in 1975 the point is simply to survive.

The failures of the late '60s, Riesman believes, destroyed for students the ideals they might once have believed possible. The student on the campuses now had grown up with the promises of the late '60s. And yet, because of the recession and the job crunch, he says, they feel locked into a struggle they find odious — a fierce competition for grades, for admission into professional schools and into the fattest, safest law or medical practices after that.

Purves says that the students he sees now are obsessed with achieving salable goals rather than learning, and that he has encountered a much higher incidence of cheating. The only belief students seem to have left, he says, is in the Yeats portent: "The centre does not hold."

Hence for these reasons, you have a campus bestseller list which speaks much less of searching for something than of searching without knowing what is sought.

Therefore, says Riesman, there is the popularity of books like The Bermuda Triangle or The Exorcist (the No. 2 campus bestseller in the Chronicle's 1974 survey) or the von Daniken books in 1973 — books which picture the world as ruled by evil forces, out of the control of humans. They pamper, he says, people's feeling of powerlessness. They pamper passivity and what he describes as "our whole society's endemic paranoia about authority." And they pamper, finally, he says, a cynicism grown so deep that people are no longer willing to take anything straight.

TOLKIEN
. . . hope

And yet, these are the grounds upon which the generations have met — with twin bestseller lists tuned to twin needs. The gap has closed, says Purves, in conservatism.

There are, obviously, numerous factors that have contributed to this meeting beyond the loss of faith in the aftermath of the late '60s, or Watergate, or even the withdrawal of U.S. armed forces from Vietnam which Astin believes reduced the number of divisive issues.

Astin cites the speedier pace of growing up, where the young are exposed to much more much sooner, be it on TV, at the movies, in the newspapers, or on the road.

Riesman follows the thought further: "A series of mutual infiltrations have taken place between parents and children," he says. "There is now a two-way rapprochement. In the late '60s, a decade of parental permissiveness, students had to go to great lengths to be different. Now the older generation has become much more tolerant of their children's mores. On top of that, everybody is too busy surviving in what they see as a precarious and threatening world to worry about the old divisiveness anymore.

They're Muzzled By CIA, Courts

By ANTHONY LEWIS

Even before the Revolution of 1776, Americans rejected the British system of licensing for publications — the requirement of official approval before any manuscript could be printed. The First Amendment wrote that disapproval into fundamental law. The Supreme Court has often said that the amendment, at its core, bars the licensing of expression in the U.S.

But today two Americans are subject to just such a licensing system. They are Victor Marchetti and John D. Marks, co-authors of the book "The CIA and the Cult of Intelligence." They cannot write anything in a vaguely defined area of national security without the prior approval of the CIA. They cannot discuss facts or even write fiction. Not now or ever.

It is an extraordinary legal situation, unlike any in U.S. history. The press has paid relatively little attention to it, perhaps because the media themselves are not involved. But some legal scholars feel that the case raises dangers more profound than those the press saw in the attempt to stop publication of the Pentagon Papers.

Marchetti was a CIA Official for years. When he joined the agency, he signed a standard agreement not to disclose classified material. After resigning in 1969 he began to write critically about some CIA activities. The agency went to court, and on the basis of the agreement, got an injunction forbidding him to disclose any classified information learned when he was an employee.

With Marks, Marchetti wrote the book. The injunction required him to submit the manuscript to the CIA, which demanded deletion of hundreds of passages. Some were so far-fetched — mispronunciations by U.S. officials, for example — that the agency withdrew in time. But it held to 168 items, and the book was published with blanks where they had been.

What are the legal issues? There is of course a First Amendment issue. But I think other compelling questions come first: questions about the separation of powers under the Constitution, and about fair procedure. Ordinarily, under the U.S. system of law, the Executive has to have legislative authority from Congress before it can take some legal action. That was why the Supreme Court held President Truman's steel seizure of 1952 unlawful — because it had no basis in any statute.

In this case there is no statute authorizing the Executive branch to enforce secrecy agreements with former employees by injunction. Congress might want to grant such authority. But it might also want to consider how long and any ban should last, and what sort of subjects it should cover — anything labeled "security" or narrowly defined secrets such as codes. In short, Congress would weigh the policy, as it is meant to do under the Constitution.

MARKS AND MARCHETTI . . . licensing victims

The strange thing is that CIA Director William E. Colby said during this case that there was "no existing statutory authority for injunctive relief" in the circumstances. Yet the Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit approved a sweeping injunction.

The burden is on Marchetti and Marks, under the court order, to prove that they should be allowed to publish something. And it is a very heavy burden.

The judge who tried the case — Albert V. Bryan Jr. of Virginia — at first was sympathetic to the government. But after hearing the CIA witnesses he found that 142 of the 168 passages the agency sought to delete from the book did not in fact contain any material classified while Marchetti was an employee. Then, without even looking at all the evidence, the Fourth Circuit set aside his findings. And it said these remarkable things:

Anything "useful if not vital to national security" is classifiable. Courts must presume that anything classifiable was in fact classified. When a document, even a large book, is stamped secret, every single sentence in it, however innocuous, must be regarded legally as classified. If secret matters become public in other ways, Marchetti and Marks still cannot talk about them — unless the CIA approves.

Marchetti has been in the courts for three years now, trying to overcome that overwhelming burden of proof — and the government's great legal resources. But the reason to be concerned is not just the facts of his case, disturbing though they are. If the government can decide what Victor Marchetti may say, without meaningful judicial review, then of course it can and will do so with other former employees. And that has very large implications.

In our society today many of the crucial areas of government decision-making are shrouded in secrecy. If blunders or crimes occur, the only hope of correcting them is through a government employee speaking out. That right is a democratic safety valve — not to be closed lightly, without legislative sanction. It is so important that even the secrecy conscious British exempt from their Official Secrets Act critical speeches by ministers who resign in protest.

IT'S NOT A LAUGHING MATTER

By DAVID BONAVIA

Of all the barriers to understanding between China and the rest of the world, humor is undoubtedly one of the highest, stoutest and oldest.

European jokes, for example, are as perplexing to the Chinese as Chinese laughter and its causes are to Europeans. Nothing is more infuriating than to find one's serious observations to be a source of mirth, or to encounter stony faces in response to a treasured witticism.

Eastward-bound traders should remember two golden rules: the Chinese are embarrassed by guests who make self-deprecatory jokes; and their laughter often signifies discomfort, for instance when they are faced with requests they cannot meet.

To penetrate Chinese humor is another matter. Fairly high marks will go to anyone who laughs immediately at the following anecdote: "An old bear was picking fruit from a tree. He took some down with his right paw and put it under his left arm, then he took some down with his left paw and put it under his left arm, then he took some down with his left paw and put it under his right arm. Then he . . ."

This joke signifies the psychological basis of much Chinese laughter: misadventure. The foreigner driving a car in Peking is astonished how often pedestrians or cyclists will grin broadly when narrowly avoiding a bad accident. This does not mean they think it funny: they are signalling relief, and a general faith in their own good luck.

The Chinese are equally baffled by many of the things that make Europeans laugh. Least of all can they appreciate the British urge to laugh at oneself and belittle one's own achievements. This seems to the Chinese to be the most incomprehensible kind of foolishness, and it sends the interpreters into convulsions of professional embarrassment.

The foreigner, proud of his wit, may be encouraged by the cascades of laughter with which the Chinese greet his more obscure quips. But often all it means is that he has said something either too excruciating or too absurd to be treated in any other way.

Humor figures high on western man's list of admirable qualities, but relatively low on the Chinese list. This may be an indicator of the unstable and even chaotic nature of the notions which we have about ourselves. The Chinese, from their earliest history, have had very fixed ideas about the things that are important in life.

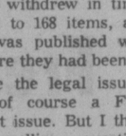
History Makes Rotten Cooks



russell baker

Americans treat history like a cookbook. Whenever they are uncertain what to do next, they turn to history and look up the proper recipe, invariably designated "the lesson of history."

Wiser men than George Wallace have been skewered on the cookbook theory of history. The country is filled with them even now, so it is not altogether astounding that Wallace, aspiring to the semblance of wisdom required to satisfy his yearning for the White House, should have turned his mind recently to the lessons of history.

There is even a certain poignancy in the absurdity of the lesson he has discovered: to wit, that the country is in a bad way today because it didn't cultivate "gemutlichkeit" with Hitler's Germany.

Poring over his cookbook, the governor concedes that Hitler's "despicability" might have made it difficult to effect an American brotherhood with the Axis. He seems to be saying, however, that this problem was no more difficult than starting an omelet and finding a rotten egg in the refrigerator. A trip to the grocery, and the omelet proceeds.

One vacillates between outrage about the betrayal of American principles here and compassion for the confused mind that can find no better lesson in its journey through the historical cookbook. And yet, better minds than Wallace's have foundered on the lessons of the Second World War, and one of the consequences was Vietnam.

In many ways the internal American debate about Vietnam, which has split the country for years, has been an argument between people who had learned the lesson of the Second World War. Unfortunately, they couldn't agree what the lesson was.

The most passionate war-makers were men who had lived through the disastrous isolationism of the 1930's, the appeasement of Hitler and the world devastation that resulted — Kennedy, Rusk, Johnson, Nixon, Kissinger, the old labor chieftains, the press people old enough to remember goose-steppers in Paris.

For them the lesson of history dictated interventionist politics and quick resistance to tyrants with sharp elbows as the recipe for avoiding a new world devastation. If Hitler had not been appeased with Czechoslovkia, went the lesson, the Second World War would have been averted. Therefore: resist the tyrant's first grab, and prevent World War III. And, therefore, NATO, Truman Doctrine, SEATO, CENTO, Korea and, finally, Vietnam.

The Vietnam resistance had also learned the lesson of the Second World War, and it was not the lesson learned by most of the people who had lived through it.

For these people, the Second World War taught that bombing's chief result was to strengthen bombed peoples' determination to defeat the bomber. This was the lesson of London.

They had learned that alien armies cannot gain the respect of distant lands by creating governments more responsive to the guest army than to their countrymen. This was the lesson of Vichy and the European resistance underground.

They had learned that war can seduce the most powerful state into great crimes which earn it the revulsion of the world. This was the lesson of Nuremberg.

Everybody had learned the lesson of the Second World War, and there was no agreement what it was. And now, we have President Ford declaring we have learned the lesson of Vietnam. It is a statement to chill the blood.

If there is any lesson of history in Vietnam, which is doubtful, it is that history is a rotten lesson book, and should never, never be used like a cookbook.

Those ignorant of history are doomed to repeat it, says the homily engraved on the back of every politician's mind. It is a clever aphorism, like almost everything else said about history, highly arguable.

We may be doomed to repeat history whether we are ignorant of it or not. As Vietnam suggests, we may even be doomed because we are not ignorant enough of history. Whatever the case, it has no recipes for policy cooks and, as for its lessons, the lessons of history are only what the lesson-seekers say they are, including George Wallace.

Local Fruit Trees Face More Trouble

A third infestation of fruit and ornamental trees in Greater Victoria this spring is identified by entomologists as lecanium scale, a defoliating crawler looking something like a fat, greyish ladybug.

Already troubled by the tent caterpillar and the looper, or Bruce's spanworm, some residents report massive infestations of the new insect, also known as the scale bug or scale louse.

Elmer Hoffman, 2025 Allenby, said he looked into his neighbors yard a week ago and saw one of the trees had "turned black. There wasn't a leaf left."

He sprayed his trees and those of his neighbors and finds some of the leafy growth returning.

The B.C. agriculture entomology branch said lecanium scales are not uncommon hazards for local trees, and recommends a diazonon-based spray to combat the pest.

There are numerous types of scale, which are described as prolific and destructive. The young feed on juices of the plants they infest.

Apple, plum, cherry, ornamentals and poplar varieties are reported to be among those affected by scales, loopers and tent caterpillars to varying degrees around the capital region.

Methoxychlor spray may be used to control the span worm, which may require two applications about two weeks apart.

DOCTORS END STRIKE

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Striking San Francisco anesthesiologists have ended their crippling 28-day walkout over zooming malpractice insurance rates, but a similar crisis is building in New York state.

Dr. John A. Driscoll, president of the San Francisco Medical Society, said he expects other California physicians who joined the boycott out of sympathy to return to work and said normal surgery could resume by Monday.

"We've been in constant contact with the doctors all over the state," he said, "and I'm certain they'll resume services. It just so happens our premiums expired first, and so we are setting the pattern."

The anesthesiologists, vanguard of the doctors' protest that has spread across the nation, voted unanimously Wednesday to return to work under a new state law providing short-term malpractice insurance while the legislature works on a long-run solution.

However, in New York state, an increasing number of doctors have said they will treat only emergency cases next week. According to sources, resolution of the California problem might set a pattern for other states.

"This is probably the most important Shell product I sell"

A top quality motor oil like Shell Super Multigrade is a kind of insurance–low-cost protection for your *auto*motive investment.

It protects that major investment in a number of very important ways:

1 It helps minimize wear on highly-stressed engine parts.

2 It helps to reduce the build-up of harmful sludge and varnish deposits in your engine which can starve the bearings of oil and cause excessive wear.

3 It combats valve train wear. If you've ever needed repairs to these vital engine parts, you know how costly they can be.

4 For sustained high speed or heavy load driving (two conditions often combined on a vacation trip) Shell Super Multigrade contains an ingredient that prevents foaming.

5 Shell Super Multigrade contains additives to resist oil thickening under hard driving conditions,

Ask your Shell dealer to check your oil frequently. A top-up with Shell Super Multigrade helps replace vital oil additives.

so it continues to do its job of cooling and lubricating the engine.

6 Short trip service can lead to engine rusting. Shell Super Multigrade is formulated to combat engine rust.

When you consider how much a top quality motor oil does–and how little it costs–can you think of better value for your money today?

Shell Super Multigrade meets the warranty requirements of virtually all late model cars–and older cars as well.

When your car is due for an oil change, or if you simply need a top-up, ask your Shell dealer to make it Shell Super Multigrade. It's a good investment for long engine life.

Craigmont

Craigmont Mines Ltd. reports net earnings of $1.8 million or 37 cents a share for the six months ended April 30, 1975, compared with restated net earnings of $2.6 million or 51 cents a share for the same period of 1974.

President Ross Duthie said the low price of copper nullified a significant increase in the amount of copper concentrate shipped by the company.

He also said that "if the mining industry is to be taxed at such excessive rates, it will be unable to attract the investment required to carry on new development, create jobs or sustain its support of Canada's foreign trade balance."

B of M

The Bank of Montreal reports its balance of revenue, after provision for income taxes, for the six months ended April 30 increased to $41.9 million or $1.23 a share compared with $33.6 million or 98 cents a share for the corresponding period, a year ago.

During the six-month period, "the bank's major source of income, net interest revenue, rose by some 25 per cent over the first six months of 1974 as interest spreads moved toward more normal levels," said Fred McNeil, deputy chairman and chief executive officer.

Average assets for the period, he said, were 19 per cent greater than during the comparable period a year ago.

However, because of uncertainties related to general business conditions, earnings in the bank's second half "may not continue at the same pace."

Total revenues for the six months reached $876.4 million, a 25-per-cent increase from last year. Total expenses also increased 25 per cent to $795 million.

The bank's total assets at April 30 were $18.6 billion, a 12-per-cent increase.

Keen

Keen Industries Ltd. reports a loss of $550,343, or 39 cents a share, in the three months ended March 31 compared with a profit of $192,640, or 14 cents a share, in the same period in 1974.

The company's gross revenues increased 27.7 per cent to $7,312,016 from $5,291,808, but expenses increased to $8,391,119 from $4,914,083.

R. J. Keen, president of the transportation and construction firm, said the loss of profits was due primarily to lower production and higher costs on the British Columbia Railway project in northwestern B.C.

Susan Pridy, who has just completed a communications course at Camosun College, has joined the summer program team as program director. Student Susan Hamilton and Maurice Midlane are the other two. The group is looking for volunteers to help with the activities.

The "shop and swap" program is resuming Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. in front of the apartments on Newton Street.

In other news, a women's baseball team — the Kool Kats — has been organized and team captain is Margretta Reid.

If interested in joining the team contact Reid at 592-3268.

Volunteers are urgently required to help lay tile in the crafts room. If you have extra time on your hands contact Pam Wowchuk at 598-7602.

There is a strong possibility a full day care centre will be organized at Newton Gardens. This will provide care for children whose parents must go to work before school starts and care after school until the parents arrive home.

William Willbond is determined parks in Fernwood will be as good and as clean as others in the city.

Willbond is chairman of a FERNWOOD COMMUNITY ASSOCIATION committee set up to look into the situation and recommend ways in which parks in the area could be improved.

He started his campaign with "strongly-worded" letters to city council asking why Fernwood parks are not getting the same "beauty" treatment as others.

He wrote the letter after making a survey of all parks in the city.

He's now awaiting a reply from the city.

In other news the association is negotiating with a firm which will give the association a larger drop-in centre. The group has their eye on a piece of land at 2009 Fernwood which has been purchased by a large developer.

On the sadder side of life, the man who led the anti-pup fight in Fernwood and a long-time resident, Dave Garman, died in hospital.

Opportunity for Youth Grants has allowed two people to operate an emergency housing residence at 702 Esquimalt Road.

Jan MacInnes and Edwin Banfield are the architects behind the project which will provide temporary housing for persons with no alternative lodging.

They are accepting referals from community groups, agencies and organizations.

The maximum length of stay is 10 weeks except for those with extenuating circumstances.

Priority will be given to single parent families, families and then single persons.

Emergency housing provides residents with a bed and linen, use of the house and equipped kitchen, cleaning supplies and the use of an automatic washer. In addition the house is staffed to supervise the running of the house and to assist residents.

The cost of the residence and its proper operation has been kept to a minimum, and residents are asked to contribute an amount equal to the department of human resources "shelter allowance" in proportion to their length of stay.

Italian Red, in the classic Italian tradition.
Italian Red is a full bodied, very dry wine reminiscent of the lively wines of Tuscany in Central Italy. The Italians have a word for such wine . . . "brioso" which means exuberant.
Italian Red has captured this true Italian character from specially selected grapes grown on the sunny mountain slopes of the Okanagan Valley.

Region Nurses Win Raise

The Capital Regional Board approved without debate Wednesday a new contract giving its 90 full and part-time nurses wage increases of about 44 per cent.

It is a first contract between the regional district's community health services nurses and the Registered Nurses Association of B.C. and brings their wages in line with those paid by the provincial government and Greater Vancouver communities.

Starting salary for a public health nurse is now $1,224 per month and for a registered nurse $1,105 per month. The contract runs from April 1, 1974 to the end of this year and includes a cost-of-living (COLA) clause which takes effect in September.

A personnel department spokesman said that while it looks like a dramatic increase, the nurses are moving from 1973 to 1975 rates.

Later in the meeting regional directors voted themselves a 12.4 per cent increase in their honoraria, the cost-of-living increase for last year.

Prior to the increase directors from municipalities were receiving $2,000 a year and directors from electoral areas $3,000. The board chairman was receiving an additional $6,000 and the chairman of the regional hospital board an additional $3,000.

Bar Bitter At Court Addition

The Victoria Bar Association has issued a bitter protest over provincial government plans for a two-storey addition to the Law Courts building on Burdett.

In a statement released Wednesday, association president Dr. J. J. Gow said the association deplores plans to house a government department in the two-storey addition, as well as plans to squeene the provincial courts into the building.

"The probability is that no sooner will the renovation be completed than it will be found to be much too small," Gow said.

"After many hundreds of thousands of tax dollars have been spent on patchwork renovation, Victoria, the capital city, will have a courthouse hopelessly out of date."

Gow said housing a government department in the same building as the court will raise "the very important constitutional issue of the separation of powers.

"In our political system the independence of the judiciary is a fundamental postulate. It follows that the executive branch of government should have nothing whatsoever to do with the courthouses of the nation."

Gow said rumors are that the government department will stay in the Law Courts building from one to five years.

He said the bar association welcomes the move of the provincial courts from their present location next to the Fisgard Street police station up to the courthouse precinct between Blanshard and Quadra.

But it questions whether there will be room for all the provincial court staff and provincial Crown prosecutors in the lower floors of the Law Courts building, as is now being planned, he said.

And while the renovation and addition to the Law Courts building is being done, Gow said, "the judicial administration of justice will be carried on in the cloakrooms of an outworn girls' school (St. Ann's Academy)."

He called it "well within reasonable foresight that St. Ann's will remain the "temporary" location of the superior courts for years.

Gow added that "no provision has been made for continuing the frequent sittings in this city of the court of appeal.

"It almost looks as if the court of appeal were being banished from Vancouver Island."

Gow said the bar association hopes to meet with Attorney-General Alex Macdonald to discuss the issues.

The move of superior courts into St. Ann's Academy is expected to take place on the July 1 weekend.

Firemen Given Last Word On Condominium Plan

Condominium townhouses and apartments may be built on a 4½ acre site in Central Saanich at West Saanich and Verdier providing the municipality's fire department can handle fires in four-storey buildings.

At this week's meeting of the subdivision and zoning committee, Ben Levinson of Orme and Levinson, architects showed plans for eight townhouses and four four-storey blocks which would contain 125 apartments.

The site is zoned for commercial use.

"We could put in a seven-story hotel with beer parlor there," Levinson said today. "Central Saanich is super-saturated with commercial development. What we are suggesting is down-zoning because there is residential development on each side."

The site is owned by Oak Bay Estates. Spokesman Doug Smith told the committee the 133 units would be priced between the high $30,000s to the mid $40,000s.

Ald. Donald MacLaurin asked whether the fire department is capable of fighting fires in four-storey buildings.

The fire committee will study what the recommended height for such construction should be, and report back before the next meeting of the subdivision and zoning committee.

The development, if approved, would be built under a land-use contract between the company and the municipality, giving council control of design and other features.

Another application to build townhouses and multi-family dwellings on a 2.1 acre site at Wallace and West Saanich, made by Wascana Construction, was rejected. The site is also zoned commercial.

The application was turned down because the land is already part of a development area declared in Brentwood.

Shamrocks Sparkle And So Do the Girls

By D'ARCY KAVANAGH
Times Staff

The girls upstaged the men in lacrosse action Wednesday night at Memorial Arena.

It wasn't planned that way, though. The main attraction was to be the Western Lacrosse Association match between New Westminster Salmonbellies and Victoria Shamrocks.

However, the two girls' teams from Oak Bay and Reynolds high schools stole the spotlight before 1,102 fans with their 10-minute exhibition in the second-period intermission.

It wasn't just their looks that did it. The girls compensated for their lack of lacrosse skill by playing enthusiastically and aggressively.

In fact, the two hardest checks of the night happened in the girls' game, won 1-0 by Reynolds.

By contrast, the men's game was infinitely duller.

The blame didn't belong to the Shamrocks. They thoroughly deserved their 17-7 triumph over New Westminster.

The fault was the Salmonbellies'. They moved as if they had consumed a pre-game meal of sleeping pills. They didn't bodycheck and they forgot about defence.

It was a strange reversal of form for the league-leading Salmonbellies. They came into Wednesday's encounter on the crest of six straight wins.

Wednesday's outing was also a change for the Shamrocks. They had lost their previous two games against the Salmonbellies and had looked bad in doing so.

"We were one-hundred per cent better tonight than in our last two games," said Victoria coach Archie Browning after his team's win.

Victory moved the Irish into a second-place tie with Vancouver Burrards, who have played two more games.

Although the Samrocks played well offensively, they got a big helping hand from New Westminster goalkeeper Bill Scriver.

Shaky from the start, Scriver looked bad on at least four Victoria goals. He removed himself in favor of Skip Jolly mid-way in the third period with the Shamrocks ahead 12-5.

High scoring Ron MacNeil paced Victoria with four goals but it was Norm Baker who actually sparked the Shamrocks' offence.

Called up from the junior Victoria McDonalds, the stocky defenceman scored twice, added six assists and continually led the Irish attack up the floor.

Charn Dhillon, one of the Shamrocks' best checkers Wednesday, added two goals and four assists with Bob Turkington also chipping in two goals.

Pete Rushton, Ranjit and Jeevan Dillon, Dennis Somner, Mike Beaulac, Jim Browne and Mike Walsh each scored once for Victoria, which led 4-1 after the first period and 8-4 after the second.

Bill Mosdel tallied twice for New Westminster with singles coming from Arnie Bye, Jim Curley, Rick Kennedy, John Hannah and Harvey Olson.

The game was also a disappointment for fans who wanted to see Salmonbellies' star Wayne Goss become only the sixth western player ever to accumulate 1,000 career points.

Needing five points to reach the coveted plateau, Goss picked up just three assists. His next chance to reach the mark is tonight in New Westminster where the Salmonbellies play Nanaimo Timbermen.

Victoria goalie Skip Chapman had an outstanding game with 44 saves, while Scriver and Jolly combined for 40 stops.

DOUG PEDEN - EDITOR

ROUGH ACTION in stands was matched by rugged play on field Wednesday night in Paris as Leeds United dropped 2-0 decision to Bayern Munich in European Cup soccer final. Collision with charging Leeds player (left) leaves Bayern goaltender Sepp Maier on ground along with Bayern captain Franz Beckenbauer (right). In centre background, Joe Jordan of Leeds raises arm in appeal to referee.

BAYERN WASN'T UNSEATED

PARIS (CP)—Bayern Munich of West Germany retained the European Soccer Cup by beating Leeds United of England, 2-0, Wednesday night in the final at Parc des Princes Stadium.

Following a scoreless first half, Franz Roth in the 75th minute and Gerd Muller five minutes later supplied the winners with their margin against the faster English squad in a game played before 50,000 spectators.

The match was marred by violence among the fans as Leeds supporters hurled metal seats onto the pitch and hit out at policemen with flags after referee Michel Kitajbian of France disallowed a goal by Leeds' Peter Lorimer.

The Leeds fans were behind the West German goal and on several occasions pieces of seats flew out of the stands and came close to hitting the Bayern goalkeeper, Sepp Maier, on the head.

One policeman was hit full in the face by a thrown chair and had to be carried off for medical attention.

The West German victory came from two rare penetrations into the Leeds defence.

Rookie defender Roth picked up a long pass from the rear and scored on a low shot from the left which had goalkeeper David Stewart beaten cleanly. Then Muller tallied with one of his patented goals, drilling in a quick shot from the right after picking up a short trailing pass.

Maier, handed the huge silver cup by French premier Jacques Chirac, led his teammates on a victory march around the stadium. When they reached the Leeds section they were pelted with debris and quickly retreated.

The game was halted twice briefly as Leeds fans rained bottles, broken seats and other projectiles onto the field. Before the game, Leeds and Bayern supporters clashed outside the stadium where police reported several injuries.

Racing: They'll Be Off And Running at Sandown

bill walker

It is fairly well certain now that Sandown Park will again be a part of the B.C. horse racing picture in October this year.

Ed Popham, president of the Capital City Turf Club, a local organization formed with the express purpose of getting horse racing back on the Island, removed any lingering doubt at a media luncheon Wednesday when he reported that lease arrangements for the park had been completed.

Final details include only the actual signing of the lease and approval of terms by the B.C. Racing Commission. And as the Commission earlier gave tacit approval to the scheme, providing a suitable lease could be obtained, the rest appears to be only a formality.

The 12-day meeting would begin on Oct. 15 with racing on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays, with the probability that the meet, if supported, would be extended to 14 days.

Complete details of the arrangements were not released. However, it is known that the Capital City Turf Club, which will operate the meeting, has undertaken to upgrade the facilities at Sandown and this will include additional wagering facilities.

George Harknett, vice-president of the CTC, explained that he feels that with an eight-race program, nine on Saturdays, the club will need a mutuel average of $200,000 to break even.

To do this additional betting windows are needed and in this respect, it has been decided to build separate quinella and exactor-type betting areas apart from the main betting compound to prevent crowding under the fairly small grandstand. The cost has been estimated at $50,000.

At the last thoroughbred race meeting at Sandown, in 1970, the daily average mutuel handle was $96,000, and the peak day was $168,000. However, since then, wagering at Exhibition Park has almost tripled and Harknett feels there is no reason there couldn't be the same response here.

He suggests there will be no shortage of horses as most owners are happy that Sandown is to operate again. Besides, the stable area is in good condition and can accommodate 290 horses. He expects that over half of the entries will be vanned in from the mainland and if necessary put up overnight in "receiving stalls."

At present there are 900 horses at Ex Park and 300 at other training sites on the mainland.

Purse monies will be minimal at the start and in the $1,000 range with an estimated budget of $200,000. A performance bond will be posted.

Both Popham and Harnett said they received the utmost co-operation from the B.C. Racing Commission. "Relations couldn't have been better," said Popham. The B.C. Jockey Club has also been most reasonable, he added.

The lease is for three years with the option of another three-year agreement and Harknett said he is confident that a number of the officials with the B.C. Jockey Club will be secured for the operation of the meeting.

"We want all the expertise we can get," he said, "and many of the people at Ex-Park already have indicated they would like to come over here."

It is not the object of the local group to turn Sandown into an Ex-Park, but rather retain the county-fair approach, with rural overtones, meanwhile seeking to provide better facilities for the racing public. The CCTC is a non-profit organization registered under the Societies Act.

"We've been working on this since last fall," said Harknett, "and we wouldn't be in it if we didn't think we could make a go of it and felt Victorians would support it."

Edmonton Grads to Mark 60th Anniversary Here

No team has dominated women's basketball as did the Edmonton Grads.

They won 502 of 522 games in a 25-year span from their beginning in 1915 until the Second World War forced the team to disband in 1940.

The Grads celebrate the 60th anniversary of their founding by the late Percy Page starting next Monday in Victoria when 25 of the 39 girls who played for the team gather. It will be the first reunion since Page's death in March in 1973 and the first outside Edmonton.

Page, who became lieutenant-governor of Alberta, formed the first Grad team from girls who had played under him at McDougall Commercial High School in Edmonton. All but two of the 39 players he coached over the next quarter-century came out of McDougall.

They won their first Canadian women's title in 1922 and never lost it. They also held the Underwood Trophy, emblamatic of world women's basketball supremacy, until they disbanded.

Although women's basketball was not an official Olympic sport, the Grads attended four Olympics in the 1920s and '30s and dominated the game in Europe.

Many of their victories were against leading U.S. women's teams.

Organizing the reunion is Noel MacDonald Robertson, who moved to Victoria two years ago. Mrs. Robertson had the highest scoring average of any Grad, 13.8 points a game in 135 contests, and captained the team from 1936 to 1939.

Other Grads living in Victoria are Nellie Perry McIntosh, a member of the first national championship team in 1922, Elizabeth Elrick Murray, who was on the first Grad team, and Sophie Brown Drake, who was on the last team.

NOEL ROBERTSON
. . . organizing reunion

The reunion will continue in Victoria until next Thursday and will wind up Friday and Saturday in Vancouver.

Other Grads attending the Victoria segment will be Margaret McBurney Vasheresse and Dorothy Johnson Sherlock of Vancouver; Helen North Alexander, Bett Ross Bellamy, Betty Bawden Bowen, Evelyn Coulson Cameron, Doris Nale Champan, Daisy Johnson, Abbie Scott Kennedy, Jessie Innes Maloney, Babe Daniel Lickoch, Mabel Munton McCloy, Winnie Gallen Reid, Edith Stone Sutton and Mae Brown Webb, all of Edmonton; Frances Gordon Mills of Red Deer; Marguerite Bailey Jacobs of Honolulu, Eleanor Mountfield Vogelson of Clarkson, Ida., and Mary Dunn Dixon, Gladys Fry Douglas and Elsie Bennie Robson, all of Calgary.

Joining the reunion in Vancouver will be Kay MacRitchie MacBeth of Courtenay and Millie McCormack Wilkie and Helen Stone Stewart, both of Vancouver.

SCHULTZ GOES OUT IN STYLE

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Dave (The Hammer) Schultz, of Philadelphia Flyers, fresh from his Stanley Cup win and claiming to have just beguiled his way out of a traffic ticket, tore up a woman reporter's notebook early Wednesday while she took notes on his account of the incident.

It occured at the Spectrum following the return of the Flyers after their 2-0 victory over the Sabres in Buffalo Tuesday night. DD Eisenberg, a sportswriter for the Philadelphia Bulletin, was covering a party there thrown by Ed Snider, owner of the Flyers.

Schultz burst into the room saying he and a friend had just been stopped for speeding, but the policeman recognized the Flyers star and said, "I can't give you a ticket. We've been rooting for you guys. But you better slow down."

Schultz, known for his aggressive play, spotted Eisenberg taking notes. He rushed at the woman, shouted obscenities and tore the pages from her notebook. Schultz continued to shout obscenities at Eisenberg saying she should be writing about the Stanley Cup, and not him, until Flyers' backup goalie Bobby Taylor intervened, telling Schultz, "Cool it. Cool it."

Meanwhile, Philadelphia police commissioner Joseph O'Neill estimated that 100,000 persons lined the parade route as the town saluted the Flyers and that John. F. Kennedy Stadium was jammed for the official ceremonies. Other observers said they felt the turnout, mostly young people playing hookey, was closer to 750,000. Mayor Frank Rizzo set the tone when he proclaimed 1975 "The Year of Flyers II."

In Buffalo it was announced that Rick Dudley, a 31-goal scorer with the Sabres, had jumped to the Cincinnati Stingers, a World Hockey League expansion team.

Rookie Pitches Shutput

Wayne Krimmer made his mark in the Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League by pitching Farmer Construction to a 10-0 victory over Kubiceks Wednesday night at Lambrick Park.

Krimmer, a rookie who pitched for Senior Babe Ruth League All-Stars last season, struck out 10 batters and issued only one base on balls while recording a three-hitter.

George Pakos helped Farmers at the plate by bashing out a two-run homer in the second inning.

Bates' 'dh' Man Getting Job Done

NEW WESTMINSTER — Harvey Stevenson is making the designated hitter rule work for Victoria Bates.

Stevenson's two-out single drove in the winning run as Bates edged New Westminster Royal Towers 2-1 to salvage split in Wednesday's Pacific Coast Men's Fastball League doubleheader here.

Towers won the opener, 3-2, behind the three-hit pitching of George Morneau.

Stevenson's game-winning blow was his 12th hit of the season, and his seventh while appearing in the lineup as the designated hitter. The PCMFI adopted the "dh" rule, which allows a designated man to bat for someone else in the lineup, this year.

Bates, who have won nine of their last 11 games to move to within one game of front-running Vancouver Magicians, face New Westminster in a four-game series at Victoira's Royal Athletic Park this weekend.

Stevenson also had a single and triple in Wednesday's opening game.

Dave Ruthowsky allowed only two hits to win his fourth decision in the nightcap, while 17-year-old Larry Cole absorbed the opening-game loss — his first of the season.

Misplaced Motor Costs Gary

A misplaced engine has cost Gary Kershaw nearly $350 and 275 points in the super stock car drivers' standings at Western Speedway.

Kershaw lost all the points and money he won in a stock car doubleheader on the Victoria Day weekend because the 283-cubic inch motor in his new 1969 Chevelle was mounted too far back, giving him an unfair weight distribution advantage. He now is ninth with 280 points.

The car was checked following the races by the Vancouver Island Track Racing Association's technical committee.

"His car owner, Harvey Chipper, and the crew were 100 per cent co-operative about this," VITRA president Fred Best said in announcing the decision.

Kershaw will drop a larger engine in the car — 350 cubic inches—for Saturday night's Carling Opener, first of a seven-race open stock car series at Western Speedway this summer.

The race, a 50-lapper, has drawn a top field and two entrants will drive cars that once belonged to Kershaw.

They are Roy Haslam, who won the Opener last year and is Saturday night's favorite, and George Stuart of Campbell River.

Stuart is behind the wheel of a '69 Chevelle that Kershaw drove three years ago while Haslam, who won in Vernon earlier this year and was second at Port Angeles last weekend, has taken over the '65 Chevelle Kershaw drove in local competition last year.

Time trials Saturday begin at 7 p.m. with racing at 8.

Second Times Tourney Gets Boost in All Events

THE TENNIS SCENE

By Max Low

Popular was the word for last year's inaugural Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis Tournament.

And it's even more popular this time around.

There are record entries in all four events, including a whopping 95 for the men's singles which makes it one of the biggest tennis events on Vancouver Island. Last year 89 men took part.

The women's entry is up, too, with 24 taking part compared with 16 last year. And there are 27 entered in the under-18 boys' singles, up from last year's 22, and 14 in the girls' event this time compared with only eight last year.

It all gets under way this weekend.

By now, one person of each pair involved in first-round matches will have received a post card telling him or her the opponent's telephone number. The one who receives the card is responsible for contacting the opponent, arranging a mutually suitable public parks court to play on, supplying balls and for filling in the post card with the winner's name and score and returning it to the Times.

All first-round matches must be played and the cards back in to the Times by 5 p.m. Friday, June 15. If no result is received, both players will be defaulted. However, if for some reason your opponent is unable to play within the time limit please notify the Times sports department.

For the early rounds, matches will be of one pro set with the Winner being the first person to win nine games. This means the score should read something like 9-2 or 9-5 etc. In the event of the match being tied at 8-8, a tie-breaker should be played to produce a 9-8 result. In the tiebreaker, each person serves twice in turn until someone reaches seven points (by a two-point margin). Matches in the semi-finals and finals will be best-of-three normal sets to six games.

If you don't see your name in the first-round draw, you will find it listed under "byes." This means you don't have to play in the first round but must wait a couple of weeks until all the first-round matches are completed.

The tournament is expected to run through June, July and August with a finals day planned for the first weekend in September, when prizes will be presented to winners and runners-up in all four events. The last 16 left in the tournament — the semi-finalists in the four events — will qualify for a special one-day clinic to be given later by internaitonal tennis star Mark Cox.

Players taking part in the tournament have no preference over others using public parks courts put should be allowed to complete their tourney matches before giving up the court. Get cracking, though. Play your game early and don't leave it until the last day of the deadline.

First round draws and byes are listed below.

Tony's Protest Hotelmen's Win

Ingraham Hotel eurpted for all their runs in the final two innings to defeat Tony's Holdings 4-2 but Tuesday's Central Park decision may have to wait for a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League executive ruling before it can be sealed away for good.

Tony's protested the game as the result of a sixth-inning ruling by umpire Jim Wilson. Tony's led 2-0 when a two-out miscue allowed Ingraham to tie the game.

Tony's claim Ingraham batter Mike Cox should have been held at second and not allowed three bases when the ball squirted into out-of-bounds territory as a result of the outfield error.

Elsewhere in softball, Sidney Hotel claimed a share of second place in the Sidney Men's League by defeating last-place KOA 10-4 at Sansca Park.

Deficit Tempers Pearson Success

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Pearson World College of the Pacific had a successful first year but still has an $800,000 deficit in its building fund and had a $50,000 loss in operating expenses, principal Jack Matthews said Wednesday.

He told a meeting of Victoria Chamber of Commerce directors the college is conducting a continuing fund drive to erase the $800,000 deficit.

The operating loss of $50,000 was not a serious problem, he said. The college collected just under $500,000 this year at $4,750 per student — with 100 students enrolled.

In September, the charge will be increased to $5,800 per student and there will be 200 students, bringing operating revenue above $1.1 million for the year. All fees and living costs are paid through scholarships offered by companies and governments around the world. It was unlikely there would be an operating deficit in the second year.

Directors of the chamber toured the college at Pedder Bay before holding a board meeting in the teachers common room.

Matthews said all funds for constructing the college came from private donations. Total start-up cost was $4.7 million, of which $3.9 million has already been raised. He said he was hopeful of soon completing the fund drive to bring in the last $800,000.

The college opened in September with 100 students from 32 countries. They are all expected to return after summer holidays, along with 100 new students.

About 80 of the present students will go to their home countries for the summer, with the remaining students staying in the Victoria area to work. Only about three of the 20 students remaining here have yet to find jobs, Matthews said.

The students are at the equivalent of grades 11 and 12.

Matthews said selection committees around the world look for more than academic excellence — they want students who have enthusiasm for worthwhile things, which may range from helping others to building things as a hobby.

The students selected are those who do well in school and put their free time to constructive use, he said.

The British Columbia quota at the college is five students with most other provinces allowed two or three. Most countries may send two or three, although the United States may send five.

There are world colleges in Singapore, Victoria and Cardiff, Wales. The next college is scheduled to open in about two years in Trieste, Italy, and Iran is also bidding for one.

In all colleges, English will be the language of instruction because it is recognized as the main international language, Matthews said.

However, an English-speaking student attending the world college in Trieste would be expected to learn Italian. English-speaking Canadians attending Pearson College must learn French as a second language.

All students coming to Pearson must have the equivalent of three years of high school English but most students find this is not sufficient background to understand all the concepts taught at the school.

Trying to become thoroughly familiar with English is one of the two major problems faced by the students, Matthews said. The other major problem is homesickness.

Matthews said the college tries to alleviate the second problem by keeping the young people busy. They attend lectures from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. Then after a short break they take part in some physical activity.

When the college opened last fall, the whole school was put to work constructing a dock at the front of the college.

"We wanted to keep them so busy they wouldn't have time to be homesick," Matthews said. "It seemed to help."

The students engage in several hours of labor at the college each week, including chopping wood for the dormitory fireplaces.

Many of them also spend several hours a week assisting at Victoria area hospitals.

The college consists of separate buildings of unpainted wood and cedar shake construction, designed to blend with the surrounding trees.

"It's a long way from the little red schoolhouse," said Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Robert McHaffie.

LAWYER SWITCH IN MURDER CASE

A sudden switch in defence lawyers Wednesday highlighted the third day of Curtis William Christie's B.C. Supreme Court trial on a charge of murder punishable by life imprisonment.

Christie, 19, of 1303 Gladstone, is accused in the stabbing death Oct. 15, 1974, of Stanford Clarence Wray, 53, of 1296 Palmer Close.

Defence lawyer Doug Christie was continuing his cross-examination of crown witness Donald Charles McCrae when he was stopped by Mr. Justice Harry McKay, who excused the jury and the witness.

After speaking with Christie and prosecutor Dermod Owen-Flood, court was adjourned. When it reassembled, Christie advised the court he was withdrawing from the case and Dr. J. J. Gow would take over.

Mr. Justice McKay adjourned the trial until today and advised the jury not to speculate about the reason for Christie's withdrawal which would become apparent.

Region Not Convinced On Industrial Park

An industrial park the federal environment department wants on the Saanich Peninsula is going to stew in its own sewage unless someone can convince regional government it's necessary.

But a department spokesman said today the park is simply a proposal and the department appreciates there will have to be agreement by all before it goes ahead.

Chairman Jim Campbell won unanimous support from the Capital Regional Board Wednesday when he proposed such a development, planned beside the federal Oceanographic Institute at Patricia Bay, be denied access to regional sewers until there's proof it's a project in the public interest.

For one thing, said Campbell, the industrial park is slated for lands now included in the provincial agricultural land reserve.

Environment Canada has about 75 acres at the Patricia Bay site and a senior officer announced two weeks ago that about half has been set aside for industry, preferably marine-oriented small businesses related to the institute's work.

Campbell said earlier discussions produced agreement on sewer servicing for the institute itself. But announcement of the industrial park plan was a unilateral move by the federal government he called "cavalier."

Norman Todd, manager of the oceanographic institute project, said today it is "extremely unfortunate" that work has come this far without better communication.

An industrial area, where private companies would be doing work related to the institute's, has been part of the plan from the outset, he said. It is government policy to have as much research as possible done by the private sector.

Todd said there have been no decisions on the industrial park and there won't be until all parties concerned are in agreement.

Project officials will have a preliminary land use plan available next week for comment "by anyone."

"We're a citizen out here and we want to be a good one. We hope we can demonstrate the project would be of value."

Oil Firms For Sale To Canada

TORONTO (CP) — A number of medium-sized United States oil companies are actively looking for buyers for their Canadian oil and gas subsidiaries, according to the Toronto Star.

The newspaper said sources close to the oil industry indicate government officials involved with the federal Canada Development Corp. (CDC) and the proposed national oil company, Petrocan, have had talks with several U.S. companies about buying out their Canadian operations.

CDC chairman H. Anthony Hampson said it is his policy not to comment on rumors.

But Hampson said the CDC has had talks with "lots of oil companies" about a possible takeover. The Crown corporation announced a week ago it was interested in investing in the petroleum industry.

Hampson said about half the companies in contact with the CDC had begun talks on their own initiative.

Tea Party Draws Top Tubber

Canada's best-known bathtuber will pilot his tub from Nanaimo to Victoria to attend the Oak Bay Tea Party this weekend.

Fred Maguire, a 34-year-old Nanaimo salesman, will launch the Bismark II at 10 a.m. Saturday and expects to arrive at the Oak Bay Marina between 5 and 7 p.m. that night.

He will take part in the annual bathtub race around Mary Tod Island which starts at 1:20 p.m. Sunday, and go back to Nanaimo shortly afterward. Duane Ripley will drive his escort boat.

Maguire set a record in 1973 by piloting a tub to Seattle, and last year he completed an 11-day, 950-mile trip around Vancouver Island in his five-foot vessel.

The annual Tea Party starts Saturday, with a midway in the morning at Willows Beach Park for the children.

At 1 p.m. master of ceremonies Fred Usher will introduce dignitaries on the bandstand, and the Oak Bay junior high scarlet Band will play a fanfare as the official tea party flag is raised.

Saturday afternoon entertainment will include the band, gymnasts, a ladies' nail driving competition, a dog obedience show, the Katherine Costain Scottish dancers, and the Zingari Puppets with their Punch and Judy show.

Skydivers will drop on the beach in the afternoon.

A dance in the park will start at 8 p.m. with the rock band Cold Sweat.

Sunday activities will include an aerial flypast by the Victoria Flying Club, the bathtub race, and an exhibition of model airplanes by the radio modellers club.

AFRICANS SIGN PACT

LAGOS (AP) — Fifteen African leaders signed a treaty Wednesday creating the largest single economic grouping in Africa—the Economic Community of West African States.

The Lagos treaty linked nine French, five English and one Portuguese-speaking countries with a combined popularion of 124 million.

The agreement was signed by presidents and top ministers of Dahomey, Gambia, Guinea-Bissau, Ivory Coast, Liberia, Mauritania, Niger, Nigeria, Sierra Leone, Togo, Upper Volta, Mali, Guinea, Senegal and Ghana.

Lagos, the Nigerian capital, is expected to be named as the site of the community's administrative headquarters.

116 Quebec Doctors Admit Abetting Illegal Abortions

MONTREAL (CP) — At least 116 doctors in Quebec have signed a declaration admitting they performed abortions or helped women get them illegally, a spokesman for the group said Wednesday.

"It is the first time such an important group of doctors in Quebec have made such a clear and committed stand on the abortion issue," Dr. Henri Bellemare told a news conference.

"Doctors don't bother sending their patients to therapeutic abortion committees anymore because they know its a waste of time," said the Sacre-Coeur Hospital services director.

Articles 251 and 252 of the Criminal Code, which require abortions be performed in hospitals with accredited therapeutic abortion committees, are "discriminatroy and stupidly repressive," a group spokesman said.

The doctors demand health department guidelines on abortion be drafted.

In 1967, a letter protesting abortion laws was signed by 417 English-speaking doctors in Quebec.

JUST A COUPLE OF HOT NEW NUMBERS:

The 1975 cars at your Pontiac-Buick dealer's are offering you good gas mileage.

Here are the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency fuel economy test results on 1975 Pontiacs and Buicks with GM's Maximum Mileage System and using unleaded gas.

The E.P.A. tests were performed on a dynamometer, a machine which simulates a number of different driving conditions. The tests simulated stop-and-go urban driving and highway driving at about 50 m.p.h.

For instance, E.P.A. tests show that Buick Century with the new 231-cu-in V6 achieved the best highway mileage of any mid-size North American car tested. The test results in Imperial gallons were equivalent to:

	CITY M.P.G.	HWY. M.P.G.
Buick Century V6	19.2	28.8

The Buick Skylark, also with the V6 and Maximum Mileage System, got the same results (19.2 miles per gallon in the city, 28.8 on the highway). Buick Skyhawk, the new sporty Buick, brought in an even better result; 22.8 and 30.0! That's Buick's new V6 again.

Pontiac did well, too!

Mid-size Pontiac Le Mans and compact Pontiac Ventura, with an improved Six and GM's Maximum Mileage System, checked in as follows:

	CITY M.P.G.	HWY. M.P.G.
Le Mans/Ventura	19.2	25.2

28·8 HIGHWAY

19·2 CITY MILES PER GALLON

Full-size cars? Buick LeSabre with standard 350-4bbl. V8 and Pontiac Parisienne Brougham with standard 350-2bbl. V8, both cars with GM's Maximum Mileage System, show impressive mileage figures in their class:

	CITY M.P.G.	HWY. M.P.G.
Buick LeSabre	14.4	19.2
Pontiac Parisienne Brougham	14.4	21.6

What kind of mileage can you expect? You probably won't match E.P.A. results in actual driving. How close you come will depend on a number of factors. Fuel economy is affected by many factors, such as how you drive, the load you carry, optional equipment, weather conditions and where you do your driving.

Let your Pontiac-Buick dealer show you the E.P.A. fuel economy test results on the cars he sells and explain how overall operating costs have been improved by the 1975 GM Maximum Mileage System.

Together with the trade-in price you can look forward to on your present car, it helps make a new Pontiac or Buick more affordable than you may have thought.

Ask your Pontiac-Buick dealer for a copy of the E.P.A. fuel economy test results on the cars he sells.

E.P.A. figures are not available for Pontiac Astre as equipped for sale in Canada.

Some of the equipment shown is optional at extra cost.

Pressure Kills $1.5 Saving

OTTAWA (CP) — Responding to pressure from private employment agencies and to resistance from within the federal bureaucracy, the government has cut drastically a new staffing program which potentially could save the taxpayers more than $1.5 million a year.

A plan by the Public Service Commission (PSC) to establish a pool of temporary workers to fill in as secretaries, typists, stenographers and clerks in the 78,000-member Ottawa-area civil service work force has been scaled down to include three government departments instead of 12 as originally planned.

Officials say opposition from private employment agencies which now provide the government with temporary help at premiums of up to 33 1-3 per cent of the worker's salary and reluctance by some departments to abandon their dealings with the agencies have reduced the staffing program to a modest experiment.

Under the plan, which has worked successfully in the governments of Ontario and Alberta, the PSC, the federal hiring agency, would hire a pool of temporary workers to fill in for full-time secretaries, typists or others who take language courses, go on holidays, fall ill or leave their posts for other reasons.

Kenneth Sinclair, PSC capital region director, said Ontario claimed a saving of $1.5 million and Alberta, $250,000, in the first year of temporary staffing programs.

The federal government could save as much as Ontario or more in the capital area alone if it did not have to pay an estimated $7 million to $9 million a year in salaries and premiums to the private employment agencies, he said. Up to $3 million of this amount goes to the agencies as referral premiums, he said.

There are 13 private personnel companies operating in Ottawa, about half surviving solely on government business, Sinclair said. On any given day about 2,000 temporary workers employed by these companies report to jobs in various government departments.

The departments are reluctant to abandon the system because the temporary workers do not show up on their books as staff. The personnel companies can be paid from budgets used to hire outside consultants or from contingency funds.

PM's Aide Under Suspicion

OTTAWA (CP) — An attempt was made in the Commons Wednesday to suspend Prime Minister Trudeau's principal secretary until allegations that he is using the office to gather information for a personal tax dispute are investigated.

But Tom Cossitt (PC—Leeds) was unsuccessful in getting the required unanimous consent to propose a motion involving Jack Austin.

Austin, 43-year-old former deputy minister of energy, became Trudeau's principal secretary last year. It was revealed recently that he has written to former business associates about a dispute with the revenue department. Although the letterhead simply said "J. Austin, QC," he said he could be reached for further information at his East Block office, and he provided the telephone number of the prime minister's department.

In the Commons, Cossitt referred to the "serious allegations" that Austin "has been using the prime minister's office as an information gathering centre to fight a $70,000 personal tax case. . . ."

He requested permission to present a motion calling on Austin to "remain absent from his duties or otherwise be suspended until such time as the allegations are disproved or otherwise."

After Vancouver Sun columnist Allan Fotheringham ran a list of questions about Austin's alleged business interests, the principal secretary said he was consulting his lawyers.

"I don't want to influence my lawyers and I don't want to make any moves without their advice," was his response to reporters."

Little Interest On $1.5B

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians have lent almost $1.5 billion to 57 countries and a couple of agencies in the last 10 years for little or no interest, figures released in the Commons show.

In nine of those years, the Export Development Corp., the Crown agency that lends money at commercial rates to permit purchases of Canadian products, lent almost $1.4 billion to 44 countries or companies in those countries.

The figures also show that India was by far the largest borrower in the period, with loans, that carry no interest or commercial interest rates, approaching nearly $500 million.

The figures for the period 1963-1974 were tabled in the Commons this week by External Affairs Minister Allan Mcnal Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen in answer to a question on the Commons order paper from J. Robert Gauthier (Liberal—Ottawa Vanier).

Gauthier asked for figures for 1965 to 1973 but the figures released also included those for 1974.

The total of 236—no—or low-interest loans was provided through the Canadian International Development Agency, the national aid agency.

A total of 202 of these loans had no interest, 33 for three per cent interest and one — $3.5 million for Nigeria—for six per cent.

Most provided a 10- or seven-year grace period before the first payment had to be made and most called for 80 semi-annual payments over 40 years or 46 over 23 years.

India borrowed almost $408.5 million, all at no interest, in 27 loans, the figures show. This represents the largest amount and the largest number of loans in the figures.

Pakistan was second in amount with almost $192.1 million in 21 loans. Jamaica had the second largest number of loans, 25 amounting to $21.8 million.

Overpayments By UIC Total $31.1 Million

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment insurance overpayments to claimants totalling $31.1 million were outstanding in April, Guy Cousineau, chairman of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, said Wednesday.

Cousineau told a meeting of the Commons Manpower Committee that about $15.1 million in overpayments had been collected since the start of 1975, reducing slightly an overpayment level that stood at $31.3 million at the end of 1974.

There were 869 fines in 1074 due to cases of fraud of the Unemployment Insurance Fund.

Ottawa to Study Air Fares

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will study domestic passenger fare structures on national air and rail lines, Transport Minister Jean Marchand said Wednesday.

"We can say in general that short-haul trips now are subsidized by long-haul trips," Marchand told Don Munro (PC-Esquimalt-Saanich) in the Commons.

"The subsidization of certain areas in Canada . . . takes place not only in the airlines but even with the railways," he said. "This is something we are looking into."

He said that in some cases such subsidization might not be justified.

"It is a situation that we are trying to set right. This would require a total rearrangement of thought . . . in the department itself and the Canadian Transport Commission."

Marchand indicated however, that he will not intervene and seek a reduction of the new domestic air fares, which went into effect Tuesday.

Asked by Don Mazankowski (PC-Vegreville) if he approves of the increases, Marchand replied that he had asked Air Canada to reduce some of the proposed increases and "I think they did reduce those increases in the Maritime region."

"Apart from that, I am not the one who is supposed to be the judge of that. It is the responsibility of the CTC."

Mazankowski then called for an inquiry into "the mass cross-subsidization which is taking place in the operations of Air Canada at the expense of the western air traveller."

The transport commission Monday upheld the third domestic air fare increase by Air Canada and CP Air in two years.

McCLELLAND

Socred 'Irresponsible'

Transport Minister Bob Strachan accused a Socred MLA of being "absolutely irresponsible" during question period in the legislature on Wednesday.

Strachan said Langley MLA Bob McClelland has been proved wrong every time he makes an accusation by way of a question in the house.

"I've had two years of this kind of nonsense . . . every time I've checked that man out he's wrong. It's absolutely irresponsible."

The minister's outburst came after McClelland asked about Insurance Corporation of B.C. employee D. A. Scrivener.

McClelland said Scrivener is ICBC's vice-president in charge of claims and two companies which bear his name are on ICBC's list of adjusters to be used by B.C. residents outside the province.

The Socred explained outside the house that he wasn't making any accusations but he wanted to know if there is a conflict of interest.

Strachan's immediate reaction was to doubt the research done by McClelland and within minutes he told reporters his fears were confirmed.

A check with Scrivener showed that the list of out-of-province adjusters was compiled for ICBC by Canadian Independent Adjusters before Scrivener was associated with ICBC, said Strachan.

Also, immediately before Scrivener joined ICBC in July, 1974, he sold his interests in D. A. Scrivener Ltd., his parent company in Regina, and Scrivener, Countryman and Western Ltd. in Calgary and Saskatoon.

McClelland had said the companies should change their name to clear up any problems but Strachan said once the companies are sold Scrivener has no control over their names.

Hotels Oppose Grocery Beer

Members of the B.C. Hotels Association were unsuccessful Wednesday in getting the government to change its proposed new liquor legislation.

The association would like to see hard liquor sold in pubs and is against the sale of beer in grocery stores.

Association president Louis Valente said the group had a good hearing from the NDP caucus when it presented its four-page brief but the government made no promises.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said he did not plan any changes in the legislation which is expected to be introduced within a few days.

He did not rule out the possibility that further changes in B.C. liquor laws might be brought in the future.

The brief said the sale of liquor in pubs would mean improvement in the service provided by public houses and would put them in a fair and equitable competitive position with other licenced outlets.

Pubs would also be less affected by strikes in the brewing industry if they could sell other kinds of liquor, said the brief.

In opposing the sale of beer in grocery stores, except where no other outlet is available, the brief argued that the move would increase the sale of beer to minors as well as the incidence of robberies.

Grocery stores might become primarily beer depots and reduce the grocery services in some areas, added the brief.

The new liquor legislation, which has already been widely discussed by the government, will allow for the sale of beer in liquor stores and the consumption of alcohol in public places designated by local governments.

Refuge Granted

CANBERRA (AP) — Tran Van Lam, former South Vietnamese foreign minister, who signed the 1973 Paris peace accord for his country, has been granted refuge in Australia.

GOV'T AD CRIMP?

The provincial government will have to sharpen its advertising policies under proposed consumer legislation, Liberal leader David Anderson said Wednesday.

He welcomed the Trade Practices Amendment Act which will hold newspapers, radio and television stations accountable for publishing misleading advertising but said:

"If it is properly enforced the government won't be able to place misleading ads in newspapers.

Government advertising, in particular full page ads in newspapers, have been strongly criticized by the opposition.

The legislation was approved in principle with little debate.

'Frivolous' Attitudes Labor Centre Target

Labor Minister Bill King said Wednesday one of the most severe problems in industrial relations is rank and file union rejection of contract packages without real analysis.

He hoped the government's proposed Labor Education Centre of B.C. will change the "sometimes frivolous" attitudes with which union members view contract proposals.

"There is more and more concern in industrial relations that rank and file members be educated in terms of contract proposals and bargaining," he told the legislature during debate of legislation establishing the education centre.

The proposal was welcomed by the opposition which stressed the need for both management and labor to make use of the education facility.

The centre, said King, will be available to management be avaiable to management and will also make public the kind of information to make collective bargaining more responsible and sophisticated.

Among newly-certified labor units and union members there is a great need for improved knowledge and skills, he said.

The centre will not necessarily require a separate building.

"I would resist establishing some slightly structured course in one location," said King

More feasible would be to have instruction offered through existing regional education facilities.

The supervisory board set up to direct the institution will include representatives of management, labor, the department of education and the labor department, and will be allowed the flexibility to establish its own approach.

The act, approved in principle, would be welcomed by the public, said Socred MLA Ed Smith (North Peace), which is tired of labor strife.

Tory leader Scott Wallace wondered if the title could be changed to make more explicit the intention that management be involved in the courses.

MLA Seeks Industry For Comox

Diversification in the form of secondary industry is greatly needed in the Comox area, the legislature was told Wednesday.

NDP MLA for the area, Karen Sanford, said many people living around Comox are employed by the armed forces and are worried there is very little choice of jobs for their children.

Young people are moving out of the region because of this lack of diversification, she said.

Sanford mentioned three possible areas of secondary industry for Comox.

Trident Aircraft Manufacturing Company, now getting financial assistance from the provincial government to build the Trigull aircraft, would be ideally located near the air force base in Comox, she said.

The Gulf of Georgia Oyster Co-op is also interested in developing a shellfish processing plant, she said.

Lauk Resignation Call

Socred MLA Jim Chabot (Columbia River) has called for the resignation of Economic Development minister Gary Lauk as director of the B.C. Railway.

"Never in the 12 years I've been in the house have I called for anybody's resignation but I'm doing so now," Chabot said Wednesday.

Lauk is "completely ignorant" of the operations of BCR, he said, and his performance is "just not good enough."

Final straw, said Chabot, was when Lauk said recently the first rail car would be produced at BCR's new plant in Squamish June 15 and then the minister learned from a enwspaper the first car has already been produced.

Lauk was appointed BCR director earlier this year after Labor Minister Bill King left the board.

Last Wish Comes True

A dead woman's last wish came true Tuesday when her ashes were buried alongside her husband's under the giant sequoia he had planted as a seedling in the 1880s.

With some friends and relatives on hand, the ashes of Mrs. Dorothy Layritz were laid beside those of Richard Layritz, the pioneer nurseryman who was known throughout North America for his skill. His nephew, Martin Layritz, addressed the gathering.

The quiet ceremony culminated a campaign to save the tree which began when Mrs. Layritz died last October.

The tree and memorial plot were spared with part-time sheep farmer Gordon Barker bought the acreage promising to take the necessary legal steps to save the tree from being felled.

POIROT IS TO DIE

LONDON (Reuter) — Agatha Christie's fictional detective Hercule Poirot is to die.

The British mystery writer has decided to publish her last novel about the famous Belgian sleuth.

Dame Agatha wrote her first Poirot novel in 1920 and achieved her greatest success with the character in the recently filmed Murder On The Orient Express.

A spokesman for the publishers of the book, Collins, said today that Dame Agatha did not want her detective to suffer the fate of fictional spy hero James Bond after his creator Ian Fleming, died and the character was continued in other books and films.

No Hair On the Heir

LONDON — Prince Charles is shaving off his new mustache to comply with navy regulations. But when he gets back to sea this weekend, he plans to try again for a full complement of facial hair, officials at Buckingham Palace say.

The navy permits officers to have both beard and mustache but not one without the other. Charles, a sub-lieutenant, returned Tuesday from a tour of the Canadian Arctic with a three-week growth.

He appeared Wednesday with only the mustache when his mother, Queen Elizabeth, installed him as Great Master of the Order of the Bath in a ceremony in Westminster Abbey.

The 26-year-old prince felt the beard "was slightly undergrown — not quite presentable for an important occasion like the ceremony in the Abbey," said a palace spokesman.

Charles returns to Canada to rejoin the aircraft carrier Hermes at Halifax and start regrowing his beard.

Daily Mail columnist Vicki Mackenzie says:

"The beard has transformed our most eligible bachelor from simply a pleasant-looking chap into an extremely sexy man. Now he's getting style."

LUKLA, Nepal — Junko Tabei, the first woman to scale Mount Everest, said after conquering the world's highest mountain she found herself "a not-so-happy woman" and decided to climb no more.

She said the ascent almost took her life, and when she reached the summit she was exhausted and feared the hard climb down again. But she said the 50-minute view of the Himalayas from the top of the world delighted her.

Mrs. Tabei, a 35-year-old Japanese housewife and mother of a three-year-old girl, reached the summit on May 16 with the help of a male Sherpa guide, Ang Tsering. Later in Katmandu, Tsering told colleagues that he "pulled her to the summit with the help of a rope." He said Mrs. Tabei fell about 50 yards from the summit and he had to hoist her to the top.

CHICAGO — John Patrick Daley, son of Mayor Richard Daley, and Mary Lou Briatta were wed Wednesday, a month ahead of schedule, in a small and unannounced church ceremony.

The mayor has described Miss Briatta, 28, as a "fine Catholic girl" and a "college graduate" who "does a lot of painting.' She has been employed as a court reporter in Chicago juvenile court and helped with the mayor's successful re-election campaign this year.

Chicago newspapers have described Miss Bratta's father, Louis, as a crime syndicate gambling boss, an identification which has pained the mayor.

"It was a low blow," Daley said of the report, "but then you can never go as low as a newspaper."

NEW YORK — A telephone caller, who told police he masterminded the robbery of a Queens bingo game to point up the need for better security, has given back the $1,206.55 in loot but refuses to surrender.

Detectives said the man telephoned the Queens robbery squad, the district attorney's office and a WCBS radio reporter to explain why the Rego Park bingo hall was robbed Monday.

The caller said bingo halls should have holdup alarm systems and other security devices because a friend of his in Pennsylvania was killed during a bingo hall holdup.

The All-Canadian Slob Known to Every Woman

Well, as they say, turn about is only fair play which is why we have Mrs. Pamela McLean, of Beechwood Avenue, with us today. Let's hear it for Pamela.

What's happened is that Pamela, alone among my women readers, agreed with me that Milady shopper in the suburbs contrives to look perfectly awful when she goes to the supermarket, that she's never quite got used to it in the 10 long years since she came here from Britain, but isn't it really the doing of men?

"Could it be that Canadian men get the women they deserve?" she asks. "I am constantly disappointed by the average Canadian male's unromantic attitude to his womenfolk."

Pamela remembers her first Canadian party.

"Newcomer to this country that I was, I looked forward to meeting new friends with fresh ideas and outlooks," she writes. "On the appointed date I ventured forth dressed and perfumed and, I hoped, maybe a little attractive. I had anticipated discussions, stimulating conversation, general repartee. Instead, my previously appreciative husband disappeared from my side like Scotch mist and I became part of a desultory conversation about domesticity. I thought of that experience when I read your claim that Canadian men still cherish femininity. When? Where?"

As you can see, this opens up a rather vast subject, namely the romanticism or the lack of it in Canadian men, and I think we had better agree right here in the beginning that we leave just a little something to be desired in that department. Or, to put it another way, we're duds.

The Canadian house-party, of the kind Pamela describes, is absolutely unique in the whole wide world. If you go to a house-party in, say, Tel-Aviv or Manchester or New Orleans or Rio de Janeiro, you will meet both men and women. The chances are very good that you will dance or that you will have a harmless tete-a-tete in a corner with a handsome dame or that you may even have a mild flirtation, which is very good for men and for women, too, or that you will enjoy in some way the wit or wisdom of the opposite sex.

I have to tell Pamela, who does not seem to have absorbed it in 10 years, that this never happens in Canada. Within the first 10 minutes of a Canadian house-party all of the males will have congregated together, usually in the kitchen. They talk about hockey scores and giant fish and golf handicaps and business problems and they tell each other off-color jokes that are seldom funny and they get zonked with booze.

Meanwhile the ladies are left in the room where the party has begun. They talk about disposable diapers and the cost of butter and the perfectly awful hair dye of the friend who is not at the party and they wish they were dead. Sometimes, usually, they get very cross with their husbands who have zonked and don't speak for several weeks.

To suggest that this is caused by the Canadian male is probably nothing but the truth. Some apologists have gone so far as to suggest that it's the climate, that frigid, lousy weather makes frigid, lousy lovers, but any visitor to almost any Scandinavian country will know better. My own experience, indeed, has indicated that the lower the temperature the higher the Scandinavian capacity for gallantry toward women.

The truth probably goes back to our British Empire Loyalist traditions in which any kind of affection was permissible only behind locked shutters, in which a compliment to a woman or an avowal of admiration or love would be considered a lamentable weakness in the male.

One obvious result of this strait-laced heritage has been the noticeable incapacity of the Canadian male to flirt. In almost any other culture a low voltage electricity between man and woman is accepted as a natural thing. True, it is more apparent in some nations than others. In Italy, for example, a house-party may seem an enormous game, like a duelling match, between male and female. A woman expects a string of compliments, on her appearance, her attire, may even distinguish between the truth and the lies, but rises to her part in the game knowing that it is one of the human animal's more rewarding past-times. Recreate the same situation in any Canadian setting and you can almost bet that somebody is going to get punched in the nose.

It is particularly depressing when it involves man and wife. I honestly can't remember when I last heard a Canadian man utter a flattering word or an expression of adoration in the general direction of his spouse. It is as if there were an unwritten rule that when the marriage ceremony is over the compliments will stop or be replaced by the weapons of irony. It's not that we are any less loving than any other race. We simply never voice it aloud, as every women wants it.

Maybe Pamela is right when she brings it all down to the female shopper at the supermarket. Why get pretty, why put a dab of Chanel No. Five behind your ear lobe, when you know perfectly well that nothing will come of it from those slobs out there?

'Pause Day' Is Slipping Away

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Most Canadians want to see Sunday observed as a common day of rest and leisure but in increasing numbers they are denied the opportunity, Gordon A. Walker, general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance of Canada, said in Victoria Wednesday.

Walker, in an interview following a one-hour meeting with three Victoria aldermen, was referring to the growth of seven-days-a-week trading and the pressures this places on employees and their families who cannot enjoy a "pause day" for refreshment of body, mind and spirit.

When individuals are forced into a pattern of Sunday working it amounts to an infringement of basic human rights, he said, yet the laws of the country offer them no protection.

The Toronto-based LDA official met with a city council sub-committee — Aldermen Malcolm Anderson, Bob Ellis and Bill Tindall — which at the request of Mayor Peter Pollen is studying the problems of Sunday commercialization and beer parlor stripping.

Until the aldermen report their findings to council, probably within two weeks, they are reluctant to discuss what policy they will advocate.

Anderson, however, did concede Wednesday that as "both a big-L and small-l liberal" he does not like to see inflicted on society even more restrictions and prohibitions than already exist.

All too often restrictive legislation designed to counteract one problem only succeeds in creating others, he noted.

Walker told the Times he learned from the aldermen that Victoria's business community has not raised any particular concerns with regard to the present Sunday trading situation.

"They don't seem to want city council to do anything as they apparently feel they can control the problem themselves — which is just fine by us . . . we have no objections to this," he added.

He had informed the committee, however, that certain Ontario municipalities have enacted their own bylaws regulating uniform store hours, statutory holidays and Sundays. And he offered to obtain copies of this legislation for Victoria's guidance.

Walker said the Alliance is primarily concerned with asking provincial governments to update their own legislation relating to Sundays, and to remove the anomalies and confusion which now exist between outdated provincial statutes and the federal Lord's Day Act.

B.C.'s own Lord's Day Act is a virtually meaningless, obsolete document inherited in colonial days from ancient English law, he noted, and is full of archaic references to "bear-baiting" and the prohibited killing of "bustards . . . whatever they are" on Sunday. (A game bird of the quail type, now extinct in England.)

"I feel the government here should ask the people of the province what it is they want to see happening on Sunday, and then introduce legislation to cover that."

Walker said one purpose of his trip to B.C. was to suggest such a policy to Attorney-General Alex Macdonald, but he was unable to see either the attorney-general or his deputy.

Earlier this year, city solicitor Jakob de Villiers informed Victoria city council that requests to the attorney-general's department for a fiat to prosecute, in cases involving violations of the federal act, have usually been denied in recent years.

Even where previously offending firms were brought to court, the fines were so small as to be virtually no deterrent at all. A prosecution of Empress Paints, for example, resulted in a $10 fine.

De Villiers pointed out that Victoria's special city act of 1916 — a unique piece of legislation similar in some respects to Vancouver's city charter — permits the city to legislate against Sunday trading if it considers that necessary.

The prohibitions could be written into the city's trades licence bylaw.

Man Held In Gun Incident

A 51-year-old man appeared in Victoria provincial court this morning charged with two counts of dangerous use of a firearm following a shooting incident in Saanich Wednesday.

Piara Bal of Abbotsford was remanded to the afternoon court session to obtain an interpreter.

He is accused of using a firearm in a manner dangerous to the safety of Balwinder Bal and Kehar Singh Pannu, both of Victoria.

Saanich police said they received a report about 4 p.m. that a man was firing a shotgun in the front yard of a house at 990 Tolmie.

Cheryl Rogers, 912 Selkirk, one of those who called police, said she was visiting a friend's place across the street when she saw a man and woman arguing in the front yard. The woman was apparently trying to push the man away.

She said he was carrying a gun and when the woman ran back into the house he began firing at the upstairs windows.

"I was stunned. I stood there and said this can't be for real.

"It sounded like a popgun; there were three shots."

Police said one of the shots went into the air, the other two shattered windows in an upstairs kitchen and bedroom.

Miss Rogers said after the shooting the woman reappeared and tried to wrestle the gun from the man. He threw it to the ground and was starting to walk off when police cars from both Victoria and Saanich police departments arrived.

The man was arrested without a struggle.

Though there were several people in the house at the time of the shooting, no one was injured, a police spokesman said.

Saanich Det. Insp. Charles Truit praised the neighbors for their quick response in calling police.

City Houses 3rd Highest

Victoria house prices are the third highest in Canada, up from fifth-highest in December, according to a national survey released today.

The higher placement, however, was more the result of relatively stable house prices elsewhere rather than a dramatic increase in the price of homes here.

Vancouver continues to be the most expensive city in which to buy a house, according to the survey by Coast to Coast Real Estate Service, a division of A. E. LePage Ltd. of Toronto.

Toronto continues in second place and Victoria moves into third ahead of Ottawa and Kitchener.

The latest survey, showing prices as they were on April 1, has Montreal a lowly 18th on the list.

A house that would cost $50,000 in Montreal would cost $95,000 in Vancouver. The same Montreal house would cost $88,000 in Toronto and $79,500 in Victoria.

It would cost $73,000 in Ottawa, $71,000 in Oshawa, $70,000 in Guelph, $69,000 in Calgary, $66,500 in Kitchener $65,500 in Edmonton and $63,500 in Barrie, Ont.

A total of 26 cities are included in the survey but the list contains only Victoria and Vancouver from British Columbia.

The list is published every three months and is designed to assist companies calculate appropriate compensation for employees who are being transferred.

The company says location and other factors make house prices vary across a city but a standard three-bedroom home in a fairly good location is taken as the base unit.

The survey showed the gap between the highest prices and lowest prices on the list was narrowing because house prices are rising faster in areas where they have been traditionally low, such as the prairies and the Maritimes.

Man Fined $300 Over Explosives

A Langford man was fined $300 today in county court on a charge of illegal possession of explosives last Aug. 30.

Judge Montague Drake in passing sentence on Roderick Welford MacKenzie, 2638 Florence Lake, commented the accused acted "ridiculous, out of character," and was possibly moved by "unaccustomed intake of liquor" when he put primacord and detonators near Gordon's Towing, 1618 Store.

Defence counsel said MacKenzie was of excellent character and his conduct was inconsistent with his normal behavior.

MacKenzie originally pleaded not guilty to planting an explosive device likely to cause serious property damage, but changed his plea when the new charge was substituted.

Guards to Follow Grievance Rules

The Vancouver Island prison guards local of the B.C. Government Employees' Union will take its grievances against the union's provincial executive through normal grievance procedures, a union spokesman said today.

The 150-member local, which believed it had been placed under trusteeship by the provincial executive, met with the business representative for the correctional component of the BCGEU Thursday night in Victoria.

The spokesman said there had been a "communications problem" about the trusteeship issue which has now been cleared up. The local is not under trusteeship, but the provincial executive has launched an investigation and is scheduling a hearing which could result in trusteeship.

The prison guards have been fighting with the executive for about six months to have auxiliary guards classified as regular employees.

The local spokesman said earlier the provincial executive had ignored the problem of the auxiliaries. The threat of trusteeship came after the prison guards took their problems to the news media rather than going through the internal grievance procedures set out in the union's bylaws.

The prison guards say the auxiliaries do the same work as regular employees and should be classified as regulars.

No Charges Against Graduates

Colwood RCMP have decided not to lay charges in connection with a student after-graduation party last Friday at Juan de Fuca arena, a police spokesman said today.

Earlier this week a detachment spokesman said "a few charges" were pending following a bottle-smashing fracas to which police were summoned early Saturday.

Police said today they have decided it would be unfair to single out a few youths and charge them with drinking under age when other students were also involved.

The spokesman said that when police arrived at the party about 1 a.m. the whole situation was too confused to be sure just who was responsible for the drinking.

Peter Kappel, Spectrum community school student council president, said a group of concerned students went to talk to arena manager Doug Ruttan this week and were told damages from the party would amount only to about $50.

The party was not an official school function, said Kappel, who added that the six individuals involved were party crashers and not Spectrum students.

Chairs Ahoy Shoves Off June 15

Victorians may back a pusher and help the handicapped in a wheelchair marathon Sunday, June 15, over a five-mile minimum course between Camosun College and University of Victoria campuses.

Proceeds of Chairs Ahoy from pledged contributions per mile will be used by Solarium Junior League for Queen Alexandra Solarium, the women's auxiliary to Pearkes Clinic, or Arbuus Crafts, which is sponsor of the event.

Participants will leave Camosun parking lot at 9 a.m. and follow Lansdowne, Cadboro Bay, Cedar Hill Cross Road, University, Circle Drive, Finnerty, McKenzie, McGill, Circle Drive, University, Cedar Hill, Cadboro Bay and Lansdowne to starting point.

They may repeat the course if desired by 2 p.m.

Although the idea is to help a handicapped person and give him an outing, nonpushers are invited to walk the course for pledges. All participants are asked to call Arbutus Crafts at 479-1665, or turn in a registration form to Arbutus at 4353 West Saanich by June 4.

Prisoners Help Teen-Agers

They Relate Quickly Says Youth Worker

By PETER MEDWID

Fifteen guys and a gal are on "a head trip."

The gal is Molly Kelly of the Vic West Neighborhood Centre, the guys are inmates of William Head prison and they have joined forces to help young and older teenagers in Vic West get it all together.

It all started six months ago when Kelly visited the prison to talk to the Optimum Group — convicts who go out into the community to help others.

"While I was talking to them I saw that there was a great potential . . . a potential to help us in our program at the centre," Kelly said.

She took the initiative and asked prison officials if some kind of exchange system could be worked out. She presented them with a program "and they (prison officials) accepted our ideas."

Earlier this year members of the Optimum Group fixed up the neighborhood centre doing carpentry, replacing windows and doing alterations.

For the last month-and-a-half two convicts come to the Craigflower Road centre to help with the program, talking to the kids and assisting with projects.

"When a new teenager comes to the centre it could take up to four months to get that person's trust," says Kelly, "but these guys don't have any trouble in relating to the teenager or the teenager relating to them.

"It really has made our job easier . . . they are on a one-to-one basis with the teenagers and it's really great to see the results.

"It shows that if given a chance kids can learn something from the cons and the prisoners feel they are benefiting by the help they can give others."

Kelly said that when members of the Optimum Group come to the centre they are supervised at all times.

Kelly related the story of one teenager who had problems, and was adopting a life style that would eventually have placed him in William Head or some other prison. Kelly said she tried for a year and a half to 'get to him.' He was taken to the prison and "placed on the hot seat" and all 15 members of the group talked to him.

"You should see the difference . . . this boy has come around a 180 degrees and that is terrific."

As well as the prisoners coming to the centre they also have exchange programs where the Vic West teenagers go to William Head to play floor hockey and baseball.

Every Monday night Kelly takes five children from the Neighborhood Centre to attend Optimum meetings at William Head.

"The cons are great and have a lot to offer the younger people," added Kelly.

CRAIG CLAIRBORNE

NEW YORK — About 10 years ago in a restaurant in Spain, we tasted an excellent gazpacho unlike any sampled elsewhere in the world. We decided that the difference stemmed from the vinegar used and determined that it must have been made from Sherry wine.

We brought back a bottle of vinegar made in Jerez, where Sherry is made, and used it on random occasions. As time passed, the bottle was empty and over the years it slipped from memory.

We had forgotten about that until a short time ago when a friend told uus he had an absolute passion for sherry wine vinegar. It had been stocked at all the fine food shops in Manhattan, he said, but was no longer readily available.

We found the name of an importer who stated that indeed he had brought in the product from Spain but no longer did because of soaring prices. A Spanish consulate official told us, however, that there still exists in Manhattan an importer of Sherry wine vinegar. As far as he knows, there is only one and her name is Susan Wagner.

We contacted Miss Wagner, who unfolded one of the most amusing stories of entrepreneurism we've heard in many a decade.

"A few years ago," she began, "I was in London visiting in the home of the Baron and Baroness John Bachofen von Echt, and they served the best salad I'd ever tasted. I asked my hostess if she could tell me her secret, and she said it was because of the vinegar made with Sherry wine. She told me that they had discovered the vinegar through Carter Burden in New York and that they had uncovered their own source in Paris at Hediard Freres on the Place Madeleine across from Fauchon. I made up my mind to find a bottle, one way or another, before going back to New York.

"I came back by way of Spain and stopped at Jerez de la Frontera where, of course, Sherry is made. It was smack in the middle of the grape harvest and everybody was celebrating what they called the feria de la vendimia.

"I learned in a hurry that most of the winemakers don't

I learned in a hurry that most of the winemakers don't want to admit they make vinegar, even if they do. If you ask them, it's like asking sotto voce, 'Is there anybody mad in your family?' I'm told that a lot of bodegas, if they find their wine is too acid or thin after harvest, throw it away. Some bury it, they say, so nobody will know. In any event, I found one or two bodegas that did blend vinegar and amit it, so I oee a ton.

"I had it shipped back in e passenge baggdagrrrde tion of an airline charter flight. The plane ane at 7 in the evening an, when the cases aive at customs, the agent ooke at me an sai, 'Lay, you gotta be kiing.'

"I to im I wasn't an I

"I told him I wasn't and I discovered one incredible thing that night. In an emergency, if you don't panic, if you don't scream, it's amazing what people will do for you.

"It took seven taxis to accommodate all the wine and four hours of customs and loading, but I had it stored in my apartment basement by 11 that night. Early the next mornign the super knocked on my door to say I had to move the wine because it wa sa violation of the fire laws. I moved it up to my apartment.

Sherry wine vinegar, with its special origin, is an interesting, expensive kitchen curiosity along the lines of pickled walnuts, quail eggs and anchovy-stuffed olives. For anyone who cares about such exotic and can afford it, this vinegar is worth exploring and, as Miss Wagner has observed, one bottle goes a long way.

Her vinegar is very strong and less is necessary than of an ordinary vinegar. She also states that the vinegar improves with age.

We recently devised a gazpacho using the vinegar, which we labeled Mexican-style in that we use chopped hot green chilies and chopped coriander. The recipe for the potato salad dressing is an excellent novelty and was given to Miss Wagner by Seppi Renggli, chef of the Forum and Four Seasons restaurants.

GAZPACHO MEXICAN-STYLE

2 pounds red, ripe tomatoes, cored and finely chopped
2 tbsp. sherry wine or red wine vinegar
2 tbsp. chopped red onion
2 tbsp. chopped scallions
2 tbsp. chopped long green hot or mild chilies
2 cloves garlic, finely minced
1 cup cucumber chopped into quarter-inch dice
2 tbsp. chopped coriander leaves
2 tbsp. chopped fresh basil leaves
¼ cup olive oil.
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste.
Garlic croutons (see recipe).

Combine all the ingredients in a mixing bowl except the garlic croutons. Quantities of various ingredients may be increased according to taste. Serve sprinkled with garlic croutons.

Yield: Four to six servings.

GARLIC CROUTONS

2 cloves garlic
4 tbsp. butter
1½ cups bread into half-inch cubes.

Peel the garlic and crush each clove slightly.

Heat the butter in a heavy saucepan and, when it is hot, add the garlic and bread cubes. Cook, stirring and shaking the skillet, until the cubes are golden brown all over. Drain the cubes and discard the garlic.

Yield: One and one-half cups.

SHERRY PICKLED PEPPERS

1½ lbs. red, firm, unblemished sweet peppers
2 hot red dried peppers
2 tbsp. salt
1½ cups sherry wine vinegar or cider vinegar
1 tsp. sugar.

Core the peppers and split them in half lengthwise. Remove the inner fibers and seeds.

Cut the peppers widthwise into half-inch strips.

Bring enough water to the boil to cover the peppers when they are added. Add the peppers and let stand about five seconds. Drain immediately and run under cold running water to stop any cooking action. Drain well.

Pack the peppers into two pint jars and add one hot red pepper and one tablespoon salt to each jar. Bring the vinegar to the boil and add the sugar. Pour the boiling vinegar over the peppers. The jars should be filled to the brim with vinegar. Seal and store. Served chilled and drained with anchovy fillets.

Yield: Two pints.

SALAD DRESSING

1 firm potato, about one-quarter pound. Salt to taste
⅓ cup coarsely chopped onion
½ cup fresh or canned beef broth
Freshly ground pepper to taste
⅓ cup olive oil
2 tbsp. sherry wine or red wine vinegar.

Place the potato in a saucepan and add cold water to cover. Add salt to taste and bring to the boil. Simmer until the potato is tender but not mushy. Drain and let cool.

Peel the potato and mash it. There should be about half a cup. Add this to a blender or food processor and add the onion, beef broth, pepper, oil and vinegar. Blend well. chill thoroughly. This dressing keeps well in the refrigerator and will not separate.

Yield: About two cups.

Chicken Kiev with shallot butter

French Touch Added To Russian Chicken Kiev

The traditional Ukranian recipe calls for fresh chicken breasts only, wrapped around chilled unsalted butter.

The international popularity which this dish enjoys has brought forth modifications in the traditional recipe, such as using garlic butter instead of unsalted butter.

Chicken Kiev with shallot butter, is a way of adding the "French Touch" to this delicious Russian dish.

CHICKEN KIEV WITH SHALLOT BUTTER
(four portions)

3 lb. chicken, cut into four pieces, deboned* and skinned
¼ cup butter
1 teaspoon chives, chopped
1 tablespoon parsley chopped
1 tablespoon shallots, chopped juice of ¼ lemon
salt pepper
cayenne pepper
3 eggs
1 tablespoon peanut oil
1 cup flour
1 cup breadcrumbs
Deepfryer, 1-3 full of peanut oil, heated to 375 degrees.

* Have your butcher debone the chicken breasts. The leg and thigh should also be deboned, but should be left in one piece.

Mix the butter, parsley, chives, chopped shallots and lemon juice together. Add salt, pepper and cayenne pepper to taste. Mix well; then, with a spoon, shape the butter into four balls of one tablespoon each and freeze them.

One by one, place each piece of chicken between two sheets of wax paper and flatten them with a cleaver. Season with salt and pepper.

Place a piece of frozen shallot butter in the middle of each flattened breast of chicken. Roll the chicken over the garlic butter; as you roll, tuck in the edges towards the middle. Place the chicken rolls, edge down, in a plate.

Insert a tablespoon of frozen shallot butter in the thinner slot of each chicken leg. Fold the thigh meat back over the leg.

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees.

Beat the eggs with one tablespoon of peanut oil.

Dip each chicken piece into flour, then into beaten egg, and finally into breadcrumbs.

Deepfry the chicken pieces, a few at a time, until golden brown. Place the chicken pieces in a small roasting pan and bake for 25 minutes.

Garnish the chicken Kiev with parsley and serve it with lemon wedges and grilled tomatoes.

Efforts on Altered Anthem

A column I wrote around the beginning of this month with regard to changes in the words of O Canada, has brought me requests for copies of the new wording, also some interesting information as to efforts made to use the new version, here in Victoria.

Soon after the column appeared, I had a telephone call from J. Duncan Lorimer, head of Victoria Senior Secondary School.

He told me that this year's graduating class in that school will be singing the new O Canada on graduation day, Friday, June 6.

Lorimer had been in touch with Harry Bigsby, school coordinator of music and special events, and discovered the words were available in that office.

"The class is practising the new words," he told me, "and they should be letter-perfect by June 6."

Curiosity then prompted me to get in touch with Bigsby myself to find out if any other school was using — or planned to use — the new words.

He said that after the new O Canada was authorized by the federal government, he had copies sent to all the schools.

Those schools, he said, had tried to put the new words across "but it's pretty hard to make them stick when boys and girls go out to sports events and other forms of entertainment when O Canada is part of the program, and they hear the old words, over and over again."

In most instances too, their parents are still using the old version, especially in their clubs and organizations "which also makes it hard for the young people."

As an example of what has been or is being attempted, Bigsby told me that it was decided this year to use the new O Canada for the annual IODE gathering on the Parliament Buildings grounds on Citizenship Day, in which the schools take part.

Yet, when the massed choir started to sing "there was little doubt, some youngsters were singing the new words and others were using the old ones."

This one instance points up Bigsby's belief that until everyone adopts the new O Canada "it will be a long time before we can actually make it universal in the schools."

The new version did not amend any act of Parliament because O Canada had never received parliamentary sanction.

There was a Bill introduced however, by Gerard Pelletier, then Secretary of State for Canada, and it was passed, back in 1972.

Three years ago — and still we are singing the old words. Amazing, isn't it?

In answer to those who have written to tell me they lost the column in which I gave the new version, or that they forgot to cut it out before throwing away that particular copy of the Times, I'm going to again print the new version here:

"O Canada! Our Home our native land!
True patriot love in all thy sons command.
With glowing hearts we see thee rise,
The True North strong and free-
From far and wide, O Canada, we stand on guard for thee.
God keep our land glorious and free!
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee,
O Canada, we stand on guard for thee."

This eliminated two of the "stand on guard" phrases in the anthem.

Instead of the first "stand on guard," the words "from far and wide" were substituted, and for the third "stand on guard," you now find "O Canada."

In another place "God keep our land" replaces "O Canada."

Let me also repeat that the bill that authorized this new version said: (1) That the act could be cited as the National Anthem Act. (2) The words and music of the song O Canada as set out in the schedule, were designated as the national anthem of Canada. (3) The words and music of the national anthem were declared to be in the public domain.

Woman Spy to Die

SEOUL (Reuter) — The South Korean supreme court upheld a death sentence Tuesday imposed on a North Korean woman spy. Chai Soo-jung, 50, a leading member of the North Korean Democratic Women's League and the winner of North Korea's highest award, the national flag medal, was arrested in May of last year.

More babies and small children die from accidents — burns, poisonings, falls etcetera — than from diseases. Therefore everyone should know how such mishaps may be prevented and what to do if they do occur.

The 16-page illustrated booklet Sitting Safely will help young people to become better and more confident baby sitters.

It stresses that a good sitter not only watches the child but also his surroundings. Children are naturally curious and like to explore. Although this helps them acquire new skills, it also endangers their lives.

Parents and sitters should be aware of potential hazards in the home. If possible, the kitchen should be "off limits" for toddlers because curious little fingers can turn on burners or touch hot stoves. They can also upset hot foods and play with electrical appliances. Some may be tempted to taste household cleaners.

The booklet suggests that small children should not be left in the bathroom. The key should be removed and the door left ajar.

Special safety tips when watching children of specific age groups are also included.

Variation On Indian Rice Dish

Kedgeree is a British version of the Indian rice dish "kitchri." This version adds imported Edam to the sauce for a deliciously different brunch, lunch or supper dish, and the cheese, eggs and salmon give it protein-packed goodness.

EDAM KEDGEREE

1 cup long grain rice.
1 teaspoon salt.
2 tablespoons butter.
1 medium onion, chopped.
1 (7¾-ounce) can salmon.
4 hard cooked eggs, chopped.
½ cup cream.
1½ cups (6 ounces) shredded Edam
¼ cup chopped parsley,
Salt and pepper.

Bring to a boil 2½ cups water; add rice and salt. Cover and cook over low heat for about 20 minutes. Melt butter in a flame-proof casserole. Saute onion until transparent. Add cooked rice, salmon, eggs and cream; toss to mix. Cook over medium heat, stirring often until mixture is very hot. Fold in shredded Edam and parsley. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Makes 4 servings.

Omelette with Tuna Sauce Solution to Casual Drop-Ins

FOOD

By MARY MOORE

It takes a confident cook to invite casual drop-ins to stay long enough to have dinner when all the time she is wondering what she could make to serve six in a hurry.

Maureen did just that. She had a dozen eggs in the refrigerator and rummaged through my egg recipes and found an omelette from October 1968 that would serve 6. Instead of a salmon sauce she made tuna. Don and the guests elected her cook of the year.

TUNA OMELETTE

Sauce:

1 7¾-oz. can tuna, not drained
2 tsp. finely chopped green pepper
1 green onion, chopped (including stems)
3 tbsp. butter or margarine
3 tbsp. flour
1¼ c. milk
1 tbsp. chopped parlsey or parsley flakes
7 small (1") mushrooms, washed and chopped
⅛ tsp. nutmeg

Serves six

To make tuna sauce saute green pepper and onion in butter or margarine until limp but not browned. Add flour and mix thoroughly. Slowly stir in milk to thoroughly combine. Stir in parsley, mushrooms and nutmeg and cook stirring until thickened. Add tuna and its liquid and reheat. Keep on very low heat while you prepare the omelette.

OMELETTE
(Never-fail—serves 6)

You must oberve all of the instructions. The rule is to allow 1½ eggs per person. Divide 9 eggs into two bowls, putting the yolks in the smaller one. To the yolks add 9 tablespoons warm water and ¾ teaspoon salt.

Beat the whites until stiff. Transfer beater to yolks without washing and beat yolks until thick. Fold the beaten whites into the yolks as lightly as possible. Have heated and ready a large heavy frying pan (iron is fine) with not less than 3 tablespoons butter melted in it. The butter should be melted to a rich gold.

Immediately turn in omelette, leaving heat on high for 1 minute -- then reduce heat to very low and cook until bottom is set and golden.

Do not stir — just lift it carefully at side to peek to see if bottom is firm. Have broiler burner preheated. Transfer omelette to shelf in oven about 7" below preheated broiler to dry off top and tinge it with gold.

Crease centre, carefully fold over with spatula and turn out on prehated platter or cut into six wedges and serve on preheated plates at once and spoon over some sauce on each serving.

Beef Kabobs

One inch cubes of chuck, blade or round steak
Tomato wedges or whole cherry tomatoes
Green pepper wedges
Mushroom caps
Small whole onions

Marinate the beef cubes for at least two hours in one of the following marinades. Add the vegetables for the last half hour. Alternate beef with vegetables on long skewers. Barbecue approximately five minutes.

ZESTY BEEF MARINADE

½ cup vegetable oil
¼ cup vinegar
1 tsp. dry mustard
½ tsp. celery seed
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. garlic powder
pinch of oregano or basil

TASTY BARBECUE MARINADE

¼ cp ketchup
¼ cup water
¼ cup vinegar
¼ cup vegetable oil
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. rosemary
pepper

Combine all ingredients. Add beef, making sure marinade covers the beef. Refrigerate until ready to use.

For a delicious and less expensive dinner, marinate chuck or blade steaks in one of the above marinades for 24 hours. Then broil or barbecue for approximately 7 minutes on each side.

Recipes Mark Innovations, Trends

By WILLIAM RICE
The Washington Post

By any measure 1974 was a year in which food played an extraordinarily significant role. Growing concern for malnourished and starving people led to a world conference on food.

In France, the Guide Michelin created a record seventeenth 3-star restaurant. In the United States, fast-food restaurants gained a record share of the eating-out dollar. And everywhere, in the face of inflation, those who shop for groceries and cook them, sought to economize.

Instead of reproducing a menu or series of the "best" among 900 or so recipes we have chosen some that illustrate innovations or trends.

Dieting, a major worry for many North Americans, has become more complex as what we eat has been linked to heart disease and other illnesses.

HERBED LAMB PATTIES

4 Patties
250 calories per pattie
1 pound ground lamb
1½ cup chopped parsley
½ teaspoon rosemary leaves
½ teaspoon dried mint
Pinch of allspice
3 tablespoons minced green onions
1 clove garlic, mashed
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Mix all ingredients thoroughly,. Shape into four patties. Broil.

Concern at the pervasive "snack" and changing eating patterns in which "food contacts" are replacing family meals, have led to efforts to make snacks more nutritious.

YOGHURT POPS

Makes 6

With all the popsicle recipes floating around, the one we like best is a yoghurt pop recipe using any kind of concenarated juice, but we like orange or grape.

1 six ounce can juice concentrate, defrosted, undiluted.

1 eight ounce carton plain yoghurt

Mix ingredients and pour into pop molds or use paper cups and a stick (insert stick when mixture has started to freeze).

Convenience foods became less convenient as it became clear how much money the consumer was paying to have the mixing, stirring or blending done by a manufacturer.

SEASONED SALT MIX

1 cup salt
2½ teaspoons paprika
2 teaspoons dry mustard
1½ teaspoons oregano
1 teaspoon garlic powder (or to taste)
½ teaspoon onion powder

Mix together and store in air-tight container. Makes about 1 cup. Use to season oil and vinegar dressing, meats, fish and vegetables

Perhaps the greatest shock of this past year was the sudden, spectacular rise in the price of sugar. Advice on how to use less was quickly forthcoming and even some recipes, including this one for using none.

CIDERGEL

Make 8 to 12 servings

2 tablespoons (2 packets) unflavored gelatin
½ cup cold water
4 cups mulled apple cider

In small saucepan, pour gelatin over water and let stand for about 2 minutes, until soft. Cook over low heat until dissolved. Stir into cider. Pour into individual cups or large serving bowl and refrigerate for 4 to 6 hours, until firm. (This gelatin can also be made with plain cider or other fruit juices. Check labels and shun products with added sugar.)

NOTE: To make mulled apple cider, simmer 1 gallon fresh cider with ½ orange, 2 whole cloves, 1 cinnamon stick, 1 small chip nutmeg or ¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg, 1½ teaspoons coriander seeds or 1½ teaspoons ground coriander, and 2 thin slices ginger root, for about 4 hours until flavors infuse. Let cool. Strain into jug or jars and refrigerate. In addition to using for gelatin, mulled cider may be served hot or cold and, plus or minus whiskey, as a beverage. Keeps for about 2 weeks.

Metric Won't Mess Meatballs

Cooks of the land, relax — metric won't mess up the meatballs.

In fact, just go on measuring in the same old way, and by the time the new recipe books come out, metric will be second nature, said Claude Chapdelaine, a sector plan manager on a four-day visit to B.C. for the Metric Commission in Ottawa.

"No one needs worry about metric," Miss Chapdelaine said in an interview. "It is coming so gradually people won't notice it for some time."

She said toothpaste, hand lotion and shampoos are now in metric measure. "And how many people have noticed it?" she said. "People buy mainly by the size of the package or bottle, and these won't change much."

As for the cooks, she said the Canadian Home Economics Association has developed a cooking measure based on virtually the same amount of the old imperial cup — only it will contain 250 millilitres.

She said that the new stoves coming on the market with celsius temperatures may take a little getting used to.

"But at least one manufacturer has told me he is going to include a small fahrenheit gauge on the new models," she said.

To make the conversion easier for supermarkets — and presumably for their customers — the government is coming up with a gadget called a cost-comparator.

But will already-suspicious housewives trust the supermarkets not to cheat them when the new prices arrive?

"Consumers will have to check carefully by their own conversion calculators to see they are getting their money's worth," Miss Chapdelaine said.

But if the supermarket area is murky, the outlook for womens' fashions is bright and clear — sizes will stay the same.

"A size 10 will still be a size 10," she said. "The manufacturers will measure in metric, but they'll keep to the familiar sizes for their retailers."

Men won't be so lucky.

"Men's shirts will go into centimetre measure, and eventually their suits will, too," she said.

The greatest benefit of metric will be the standardization of measures, she said.

"And it will be a great time-saver for mathematics teachers. Children will no longer have to spend time converting to fractions. They'll just move the decimal point.

Chicken Livers, Walnuts

Serves 6

1½ cups walnuts
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup soy sauce
4½ tablespoons dry sherry
3 cloves garlic
1½ pounds chicken livers
1 cup chicken broth
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
Flour seasoned with salt and pepper
3 tablespoons butter
3 cups cooked rice

Saute walnuts in butter until golden. Drain and salt lightly. Combine soy sauce, sherry, sugar and garlic. Add washed and drained chicken livers to marinade for at least an hour, or overnight.

To serve, strain marinade into saucepan. Combine a little marinade with cornstarch to make paste; return to pan with Worcestershire. Stir to blend.

Cook until mixture thickens a little.

Meanwhile dust chicken livers with seasoned flour. Saute livers in butter just to brown. Interiors should be pink. Add livers to sauce; heat through. Spoon into serving sish; top with walnuts and serve with rice.

Teach, or Play?

DEAR ABBY: "Perplexed Pianist," a piano teacher, asked, "If I play a number or two at my students' recital, would I be accused of showing off?"

You requested comments from experienced piano teachers. Among my former pupils are Shirley Temple, Harpo Marx and and Dana Andrews, so perhaps I qualify.

If the piano recital involve beginners, the teacher should not perform solo because the discrepancy between her advanced playing and that of her pupils would be too great.

However, the teacher could play a duet with some of her students — with the teacher playing the bass part in order to give the pupil all the "glory."

Or the teacher could give a short lecture, demonstrating the various styles of playing and mentioning some of the outmoded disciplines to which kids were subjected in the past (For example, pupils had to play while balancing a coin or button on the backs of their hands, and if the button fell off, they'd get whacked with a ruler.)

Such a demonstration would be both entertaining and informative.

FELIX DE COLA

DEAR FELIX: For another piano teacher's point of view, read on:

DEAR ABBY: I have been a piano teacher for half a century, and unless times have changed, the purpose of a recital is to show the parents what their children have learned and to help the students gain confidence by performing in public. It is definitely not to entertain the parents. If the teacher wants to "perform," let him give his own recital.

HIGHLAND PARK, ILL.

DEAR ABBY: If you arrived at a party and saw another woman wearing a dress exactly like the one you were wearing, what would you do?

HAPPENED TO ME

DEAR HAPPENED: Probably the same thing any other woman would do. I'd manage a weak smile and utter some banality about our both having "good taste." (P.S. I would not, as some women have been known to do, rush home to change.)

DEA RABBY: I say "hurray" for that little old lady who got up the gumption to replace her lost dentures, even though she had to plunder other residents of the convalescent home to do it.

I work as a speech therapist in homes for the aged, and my biggest problem is that most of these old folks refuse to wear dentures even when they have them. The result is that their faces fall in, their speech becomes thick and unintelligible and they are soon limited to mushy foods.

The poor dear probably thought she was robbed, so her philosophy was, "A tooth for a tooth."

"SPEECHIE"

DEAR SPEECHIE: Maybe so. But "he who takes what isn't his'n must give it back, or go to prison."

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

The most difficult segment of defensive bidding in duplicate bridge is the subject of reopening the bidding when the opening bidder or his partner has passed the hand out at the one or two level.

The resolution of these situations often becomes a matter of guesswork. An example is presented in today's deal.

East-West vulnerable. South deals.

♠ J 8 4
♥ A 8 4
♦ K J 10 3 2
♣ A 3

WEST	EAST
♠ A K Q 2	♠ 9 7 6
♥ Q 7 5 2	♥ J 9 6
♦ A Q 7 6	♦ 9 8 5 4

SOUTH
♠ 10 5 3
♥ K 10 3
♣ K 10 9 8 7 6 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 ♦	Pass	Pass
Dbl.	1 ♠	1 NT	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

After East had passed West's opening one-diamond bid, South had a problem. Should he pass? Should he bid two clubs? Should he make a take-out double with only two kings?

He quickly eliminated the "pass." In duplicate bridge one learns not to sell out to an opponent who has opened with one of a suit and the latter's partner has passed. If fourth hand passes in these situations, more often than not his side obtains a poor score.

South finally decided to "double" in the hope that his partner possessed either five hearts or five spades. But things didn't turn out as hoped for, and South eventually purchased the contract for three clubs.

West started out by cashing three spade tricks. He then led a heart, and East's jack Was taken by South's king. The ace and king of trumps were played next, in the fond hope that the four adversely held trumps were divided 2-2. When the suit failed to divide, South led a third trump, which was taken by East's queen.

East couldn't afford to lead a heart—if, for example, he led the nine, it would be covered by South's ten, West's queen, and dummy's ace. The board's eight-spot would now be a winner. And if, instead, East led a low heart, South, by guessing not to put up the ten, would avoid losing a heart trick.

So East led a diamond. Which South ruffed. He then cashed the rest of his trumps. His last three cards were the seven of trumps and the 10-3 of hearts. West held the Q-7 of hearts and the diamond ace. Dummy had the A-8 of hearts and the diamond king. On the lead of South's last trump, West was squeezed: either he had to discard the diamond ace, or unguard the heart queen. Thus declarer made the last three tricks to fulfill his contract.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Changes in plans indicated, especially those involving visits, messages, calls and short trips. Friend has information of value. Be sure it is not distorted. Gemini, Virgo and Sagittarius could figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Study Aries message. Don't overspend. Someone is trying to sell you an outdated model. Know it and protect your own interests. Fast-talking operator deserves sympathy but not your money. Act accordingly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Highlight long-range plans, projects. Refuse to be painted into corner, emotional or otherwise, Taurus, Libra persons may be in picture. Be willing to review procedures. Taking temporary backward step should not be cause for embarrassment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Someone may be talking behind your back. Be aware and do some building of goodwill bridges. Investments, taxes and insurance policies are spotlighted. Consult partner, mate. Interest in occult provides some creative recreation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If married, you may be read riot act concerning past promises and present performances. If single, you are made aware of obligations, legal, moral and otherwise. Friend, generally in your corner, may take cover.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Practical approach now is better than fantasy. Aggressive persons may push for decisions, answers. Finish before you think of beginning another project. Aries, Taurus and Libra are featured. Spotlight is on elevating employment situation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23- Oct. 22): Strive to express yourself, especially where loved ones are concerned. Holding back would be negative. You have something to say, to impart. Do so and do it in direct, independent manner. Long-distance call, communication is not the whole story.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Backtrack where taxes, partnership investments enter picture. There is more to see—and know. You have right to consolidate forces. If others object or want to push you into rigid position—rebel. Maintain your own style and independence.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Short journey may prove the end of a search. You seem able now to strike right chord at proper time. Your statements, actions bring constructive results. Gemini plays role as does another born under your sign.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Money, valuables, hobbies associated with special acquisitions—these are likely to be spotlighted. You tear apart some phases of your life for ultimate purpose of rebuilding—with stronger base. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio persons figure prominently.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lunar cycle is high and you are able to correct recent mistakes. Yes, you do receive proverbial second chance. Lovers' quarrel is result of misinterpretation of message. This could end in rousing laughter.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Family member seems to relish being contrary. Know it and be amused by it. Trying to change people would be fruitless. Home environment is more important than usual. Purchase of gift for special occasion should be on agenda.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you laugh a lot, eat a lot, travel a lot and indulge yourself. You know what is best but often do the opposite. You are in a whirl of activity. You just (in May) concluded a major business or security arrangement. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life.

Sentence Delayed, Despite Plea

A 19-year-old Victoria man was found guilty Wednesday by a county court jury of robbery.

But Daniel Hugh McIsaac's plea for an immediate sentence was rejected by Judge H. L. Skipp, who ordered a pre-sentence report. Sentencing was set for June 20. McIsaac will continue in custody.

Judge Skipp had told the jury it had a duty to decide if McIsaac, 1166 Summit, was so drunk he was incapable of forming a specific intent to rob or to steal.

The jury deliberated half an hour before returning the guilty verdict.

He was charged at the outset of the two-day trial with unlawfully stealing from Maurice Detour a wallet and contents while armed with an "imitation of an offensive weapon, to wit, a starting pistol" in Saanich, April 13.

This was amended by Crown counsel Dwight Whitson just prior to summations to robbery, with deletion of references to an offensive weapon.

Through his lawyer, Bruce McConnan, McIsaac said he wanted an immediate sentence but Judge Skipp said he wanted a pre-sentence report first so he could know all the possible information about him.

LACK OF BRIEFS CUTS HEARING

A hearing by the British Columbia Industrial Relations Board into the provincial minimum wage came to a quick end Wednesday after only one organization presented a short brief.

The board, which now has completed a series of hearings on the $2.50-an-hour minimum wage, adjourned the hearing about 10 minutes after it started in the morning. Afternoon sessions were cancelled.

Board chairman James Matkin said the turnout is either evidence that Victorians are confident the board will make the proper decision or that they don't care.

He said he will be "particularly disappointed if there is criticism when the decision is made."

Les Litwin, representing the Greater Victoria Apartment Owners Association, said in his brief the profitability of the industry has been affected by rent controls and soaring operating costs.

He said there should be an increase of 10.6 per cent in the minimum wage this year to allow workers to keep up with the cost of living.

Provincial Scholarship

University of B.C. graduate Mark Steven has been awarded the $7,000 provincial Queen Elizabeth II Centennial Scholarship.

Steven graduated from UBC with an English major in 1973 and has since been studying law at the University of Kent and Cambridge University in England.

The scholarship was set up in 1971 and is awarded by the provincial government to a student who has graduated from a B.C. university and wishes to do further studies in the United Kingdom.

Two Lewis Clark Fellowships Established

Two $5,400 fellowships have been established in honor of the late Dr. Lewis J. Clark, well-known naturalist and professor of chemistry at the University of Victoria.

The Lewis J. Clark Fellowship will be awarded annually to two UVic students of good academic standing, one in botany and one in chemistry.

Chemistry department chairman Dr. A. D. Kirk said UVic has received $12,000 from a donor who wants to remain anonymous to start a memorial fund in honor of Clark.

He said the university hopes other donations will be added to the fund.

Clark, who died in March, 1974, gained international fame for his photographic studies of nature, best illustrated in his popular book Wild Flowers of B.C.

He planned six field guides based on this book, but died after only two had gone to press.

John Trelawny of the UVic biology department, Clark's widow and Gray's Publishing Ltd. of Sidney are publishing the remaining four guides.

Woman Welcomed as Clerk

The first female in B.C. to become part of the legislature's clerks staff, Mrs. Evelyn Miller, was officially welcomed to the house Tuesday.

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young said she was sure she spoke for all women members of the assembly when she welcomed the former clerks' secretary.

COSY WALK TO ASSIST CANCER LABS

'Hills' Have Shortcomings

"Plant in hills, 36 inches apart, three seeds to a hill." We read these instructions in several older gardening books, and occasionally in current seed catalogues.

To most of us a hill is soil raised above the level of the surrounding soil. The purpose of raising soil is to accelerate drainage, thereby raising the temperature.

Originally, planting in raised hills was advised for all vegetables susceptible to collar rot when the soil surface remained damp. There was a time when the cucurbits (cucumbers, marrows, squash, pumpkin) and both early and late lettuce were sown in this way, and the practice is still followed on wet lowland soils.

As you may have noticed when reading several books on the same subject, one author will repeat, almost word for word, a portion of a previous author's work.

This happened with the term "plant in hills" long after its original meaning had been changed. It was used indiscriminately whenever a few seeds were to be sown in a group with a good space before the next group.

Such a definition of "hill" is given in several books on gardening terms and practices, with the notation that a "hill" can be raised or on the level.

Some English writers considered the term ambiguous and preferred to use "station," a station being a point on level soil as opposed to a hill which was raised sail.

However, the distinction was never widely adopted, and whether the gardener should use a hill or a station depends on his soil, the local climate in the area of his garden, and the plants he intends growing.

Locally, one has only to work with raised hills for one season to find their shortcomings. After mid-May the raised soil rapidly dries out and it becomes increasingly difficult to maintain sufficient moisture to maintain plant growth. It is then we wish the plants were in a depression rather than up on a hill.

When the gardener is in doubt as to the drainage of his soil in spring, he is often better off to delay sowing for a week or two and then sow on the level so that sufficient moisture can be maintained at the plant roots during the dry months.

On the other hand, raised beds can be used to advantage in our cool wet springs. A raised bed implies an area several feet wide and long, well prepared with compost in the fall.

They work well for small sowings of hardy vegetables in March to early April, especially when used in conjunction with portable coldframes and glass window-sash covers.

These early crops are usually harvested by mid-May, after which the raised soil is returned to the drainage ditch from which it was taken to increase the height, formisg a level bed for sowing summer and fall crops.

One raised bed, often found in gardnes and not fully exploited, is the space between sowings of early peas when the trench method is used.

The soil taken from the trenches can be levelled and lettuce seedlings transplanted 10 inches apart with a catch-crop or radish seed sown in a small circle between each lettuce.

The radish is harvested in 28 days, and then the odd lettuce is removed to allow space for picking the peas. This is one way of using every inch of soil in a small vegetable patch.

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call:

Before the Judge

Judge Fred Green postponed sentencing Wednesday of a 40-year-old man whose case defence lawyer David Wilson called "one of the saddest ever before the court."

Francis Joseph John, of 525 Johnson, whose criminal record goes back 23 years and includes 22 convictions for which he received a total of 22½ years in prison, pleaded guilty in provincial court May 14 to two charges of breaking and entering and theft and had been remanded in custody for a presentence report.

Green said he wanted a fuller picture. He ordered a separate psychiatric report and remanded John to June 25 for sentencing.

While on mandatory supervision, John had stolen $18 in coins from the Nut House, 718 Yates, on May 3, and $687.85 worth of drafting equipment from Island Blueprint, 1125 Blanshard, on April 20.

Wilson said John committed the offences to be recommitted to prison because of his inability to cope in society.

John has been institutionalized since the age of 10, Wilson said. He was released from a boys' reform school at age 18 but the longest period of time he managed to stay out of prison since then was three months.

"How can he be expected to cope in society when he has never had the opportunity to learn?" asked Wilson.

"Since 1972, it has been recommended time and time again to release John gradually into society by placing him in a controlled environment such as a half-way house, but not a single step has been taken in this direction."

Wilson said during John's last release from prison, he took the initiative to find himself a job.

"He lined himself up with a job interview at the Swartz Bay Terminal . . . he didn't have any money and was staying at the Salvation Army Hostel at the time . . .

"As he could not afford bus fare, he got up at six in the morning and walked to Swartz Bay for the interview, then walked back again . . . I suggest, your honor, this is a most extraordinary thing. He is genuinely trying to do something to help himself."

Wilson also said John's aptitude tests showed "exceptional social intelligence which, when compared with first year university students, is so high it goes right off the chart."

Wilson suggested that in view of John's case and that he has another 279 days to serve in prison on his previous conviction, a short jail term and lengthy probation period in a half-way house would be appropriate.

"I feel the best way society is to be protected is to rehabilitate this man," Wilson said.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett asked for a sentence consistant with John's record, which, he said, would provide greater protection for society.

Gary Steven Galbraith, 17, of 191 Lagoon Road, was remanded to June 13 for presentence report and sentencing after he pleaded guilty to two counts of uttering of forged cheques, four of false pretences and one of theft.

Prosecutor Birkett said Galbraith had bought a truck late in April from a Colwood man, and found a number of blank cheques in the car's trunk.

Saanich detectives told the court Galbraith said in an interview he was short of cash and wanted to buy a car.

So he filled in one of the blank cheques for $5,620 and deposited it in a Victoria bank. Galbraith then wrote or used four worthless cheques to obtain $488 worth of stereo equipment, recordings and clothing.

On the theft charge, Birkett said Galbraith answered a newspaper ad offering a motorcycle, went to the owner's home, asked to test drive the bike and didn't return.

Galbraith is already on probation for theft of another motorcycle in April of this year.

Galbraith is also charged with possession of motorcycle parts, frame and gas tank and theft of 15 cases of empty bottles. He pleaded not guilty to both charges. Trial date is set for Aug. 11.

Gary Edward Mottle, 18, of 425 Campbell Road, was ordered to stand trial following preliminary hearing for possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

He had elected trial by judge and jury Feb. 10.

In the court section of Judge Harold Alder, a 30-day term was given to John Robert Vantreight, 21, of 3401 Island Highway.

Vantreight pleaded guilty to dangerous driving and driving while his licence was under suspension. He was also fined $400, placed on one-year probation term, prohibited from driving for three months and ordered to take the impaired driver's course.

Colwood RCMP said a white car proceeding dangerously on Goldstream Avenue May 19. Police tried to turn around to stop the car but it vanished.

Police said 15 minutes later the car was seen again on Highway No. 1. Police pulled over and put on the car's red light to signal the car to stop.

But the car started speeding toward Victoria at 80 miles an hour, passing 15 cars on the right lane shoulder gravel. The car attempted to turn right on to Helmcken Road, lost control and landed in the corner ditch. Ventreight was found seated in the car.

Butcher Strike Threatened

VANCOUVER (CP) — George Johnston, president of the British Columbia Federation of Labor and secretary-manager of Local 212 of the Meat Cutters' Union, said Tuesday the formation of the Food Industry Labor Relations Council may lead to a strike against retail food stores.

Formation of the council was announced Monday, following a breakdown in negotiations late last week by the meat cutters and Local 1518 of the Retail Clerks' Union with major supermarkets. The Employers' Council, allowed under a section of the B.C. labor code, covers almost all retail food stores, 80 per cent of the province's wholesale distributors and a large number of food manufacturers.

Council spokesman Bill MacDonald said a formal bargaining organization is necessary because current union wage demands were "so high they could not be negotiated."

In the current negotiations, MacDonald said, general clerks are asking a 33.6-per-cent raise (to $16,500), journeyman meat cutters 52.61-per-cent (to $21,114), and meat wrappers 76.2 per cent (to $19,240) during one year.

The clerks previously earned $12,376 a year, the cutters $18,836 and the wrappers $10,920.

Johnston said, however, that the employers entered into a similar pact in 1969 when the meat cutters sought a reduction of hours in the work week. He said the pact was made on the insistence of the Oakland, Calif., head office of Safeway Stores Inc., of which Canada Safeway Ltd. is a wholly-owned subsidiary.

He said the 1969 pact led to a bitter 3½-month strike-lockout, as a result of which the meat cutters won the time-off provision.

Johnston said he feels the employers banded together this year at the insistence of the Employers' Council of B.C., which had criticized the magnitude of food industry wage settlement.

Rudy Krickan, spokesman for the Retail Clerks' Union, declined to comment on MacDonald's remarks.

Canada's Press 'Stingy' on News

Victoria Times editor George Oake Tuesday rapped the press of Canada for being stingy toward its coverage of international news and Canadian foreign policy.

Essentially, Oake told a meeting of the United Nations Association of Victoria, the Canadian Press co-operative and large-circulation newspapers and chains which control it have fallen down in the job of reporting and interpreting world events for Canadian readers.

"It is this policy, the stingy funding of CP by its member papers, that results in less than adequate coverage of Canadian and international events. The fault lies mainly with the large chains. They control 58 of the 114 votes and could change CP policies if they so wished. But they don't," Oake said.

He explained it is cheaper to buy news services of Associated Press, Reuter or United Press International than for papers to send their own reporters abroad.

A country of 22 million, with possibly five million newspaper readers, cannot afford to dispatch correspondents throughout the world as do American papers.

But he felt Canadian publishers could do a better job than they have done; reporters should be permitted more interpretive writing; there should be more questioning of the official view as represented by handout statements from government.

"If newspapers don't change their ways, they may find themselves replaced by other media willing to spend money. There are hints of change. But for the most part we have 19th century reactions to 20th century events."

Czech Leader Consolidates Power

PRAGUE (WP) — The Czechoslovak Parliament swiftly amended the constitution Wednesday to clear the way for Gustav Husak, the Communist party leader, to also take over the presidency and apparently consolidate his personal power.

By taking both key posts, Husak seems to have outmanoeuvred his more dogmatic rivals in the ruling politburo, according to diplomatic observers here.

Husak, 62, who replaced Alexander Dubcek as party leader following the Warsaw Pact invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968, will be formally elected to succeed President Ludvik Svoboda at a special parliamentary session next Wednesday.

The ailing 79-year-old Svoboda has not been able to perform his duties for more than one year because of cardiovascular problems. Authoritative sources said Wednesday that Svoboda's health had deteriorated to a point where he is incapable of even signing the document of resignation.

Husak was formally nominated for the presidency Wednesday afternoon by the National Front, a coalition of political groupings totally dominated by Communists.

CIA Dumping Its Castoffs In Canada?

RCMP To Check On CIA

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canada seems to be becoming "a dumping ground" for shady persons connected with the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, an MP charged in Parliament Wednesday.

Derek Blackburn (NDP—Brant) raised the issue by asking Immigration Minister Robert Andras about the granting of landed immigrant status to an alleged "self-confessed torturer, bomber . . . who was also a CIA-trained Uruguayan police officer."

He said Nelson Bardecio was also "an accessory to murder" and that he had been allowed into the country "under somewhat strange circumstances.'

Blackburn tied in this case with his attacks on Andras for allowing former South Vietnamese Lt. General Dang Van Quang into Canada — a man described publicly as "the most corrupt official in Vietnam."

Outside the House, Blackburn told reporters that Bardecio came to Toronto in 1972 from Uruguay "where he was working for the CIA."

According to him, Bardecio was ordered deported a year later but he appealed and the order was dropped, whereupon "he seems to have gone underground."

Blackburn asked Andras whether he would review his policy of "relying on foreign-based intelligence agencies such as the CIA for information concerning potential immigrants to Canada."

Andras replied that those who advise him on the "security of criminality in respect of applicants who come to Canada do not concentrate on the use of one or another agency."

He said the CIA was only one of the various sources utilized, and that is when Blackburn raised the point of Canada being used to "cool off" former CIA agents.

"... in the case of Quang and Bardecio it is clear that agencies such as the CIA are not going to provide information about the criminal activities of their former paid agents," he said.

There were reports, vehemently denied by Andras, that the CIA had pressed for the swift release of Gen. Quang from a refugee camp at Fort Chaffee, Ark. and that Canada may have taken him in as a favor to U.S. authorities.

Blackburn said that "cooling off" in Canada would keep former CIA employees "out of the eye of American Congressional committees."

He said outside the House that other names were "trickling in" to him.

Gen. Quang, who came to Canada under a special one-year minister's permit May 15, is now living in Montreal at the home of a former Saigon banker convicted last year of large-scale embezzlement at Vietnam's second-largest bank.

Meanwhile, Vietnamese students in Montreal are seeking the return of money Quang received from their relatives for exit visas that were not received, a member of the Vietnamese committee in Montreal aiding refugees said.

Tfinh Quang Vinh said that when reports of the general's arrival spread, students began hunting him for the visa money.

He said some persons in South Vietnam paid as much as $5,000 or $10,000 for exit visas before the country's collapse.

Arms Deal Disrupted

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. government analysts feel Egyptian president Anwar Sadat's figures were too high when he said that the Soviet Union had concluded a $12 billion arms deal with Libya in exchange for bases in the country. They feel reports of a $1 billion deal are more plausible but say even that amount of arms adds new tension in an area threatened by war.

Gov't Rules an End To Spending a Penny

The frustrations of pay toilets will soon be gone forever in British Columbia.

No longer will harried shoppers and irritated travellers have to fumble for a dime or be stuck with a grubby corner cubicle in public washrooms.

The Free Public Toilets Act, introduced in the legislature Wednesday to the delight of MLAs, will outlaw pay toilets or any charges for the use of toilets in public places.

"It's a serious bill . . . it's just another fairness creeping into our system," explained Health Minister Dennis Cocke.

Pay toilets are "a great inconvenience", he said, and are also sexist, since women have to pay more often than men.

The bill has a great deal of universal support, he added.

It will not likely be small businessmen who are affected by the legislation, said Cocke, because it is usually big airports and hotels which have long rows of pay toilets.

The bill will likely come into effect within a few months and will mean owners will have to remove all existing locks from toilets.

Public places or buildings are described in the bill as: churches, theatres, auditoriums, amphitheatres, stadiums, commercial or industrial buildings, hospitals, railway cars, stations or depots, ferries and public parks or campsites.

Cocke said there is still some question, however, whether the federal government will be required to abide by the legislation in federal airports.

Plundering Since 1492

VANCOUVER (CP) — An Indian spokesman told the Commons - Senate committee on immigration that immigrants to North America have been raping, destroying and killing since the days of Columbus.

Derek Wilson, spokesman for the American Indian Movement and a member of the Haisla nation at Kitimat, told the committee Wednesday night to settle issues with the Indian people before any more immigrants are let into the country.

"All you white people are immigrants," he said. "You should ask the Indian people if you can stay.

"There has been a great rape of Mother Earth since the coming of the white man. You have destroyed the air we breath and the water we drink.

"We welcome the people here if they respect us, our philosphy and our earth. But you came, you raped, you destroyed and you killed.

"Settle the issues with the Indian people before you let any more in. I don't want money for my land but for all the sufferings and killings my people went through."

Ottawa File Lists Known Marijuana Smokers

OTTAWA (CP) — If you are known to have smoked marijuana or hashish, the odds are that your name is in a special file at the federal bureau of dangerous drugs here.

However, it's only for statistical purposes and privacy is strictly maintained, Dr. A. B. Morrison of the federal government's health protection branch, said today.

"We've been keeping records on drug abuse since the 1930's and haven't had a complaint from anyone that this information has been misused," Dr. Morrison said.

The file is called "known cannabis users in Canada" and contains 104,862 names, mostly accumulated in the 1960s and '70s. Separate files are kept for other kinds of drug abuse.

In 1974 there were 32,000 new files added for men and 4,500 for women. More than 80 per cent of those involved are under 24.

There are also four new files for persons 70 or older.

Dr. Morrison said the information for the files came from the government, the Addiction Research Foundation, pharmacies and hospitals.

"It shows us the extent of drug abuse, indicates trends and helps us develop adequate programs to fight it," Dr. Morrison said. "It is never given to law enforcement agencies."

He said the information was only released to the public in the form of statistics, but names could be given to doctors, treatment centres and parole boards.

"We often get calls from St. Joseph's Hospital in Hamilton to verify that people who come in for methadone treatment are known heroin addicts," Dr. Morrison said. "There is always the worry that they are just getting the stuff to sell on the streets."

Parole boards are informed because drug use is often a violation of parole, he said.

The Addiction Research Foundation says a federal pardon does not insure a file will be closed because pardon notices are not always sent to the dangerous drug bureau.

DELIGHTED OPPOSITION SALTS WOUND

Cabinet Covers Over Split

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Government ministers scrambled yesterday to paper over a suddenly visible crack in cabinet solidarity over the effect of wage increases on Canada's economy.

Source of the consternation was a speech by Labor Minister John Munro Tuesday, which ran directly opposite to recent statements by Prime Minister Trudeau and Finance Minister Turner.

Munro refuted statements that because Canada's wages and salaries are rising at a much faster rate than those in the U.S. it is jeopardizing Canada's competitive position.

He referred to the statements as "a prevailing myth."

Opposition parties delightedly hammered at Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp yesterday, asking what is the official government position.

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield quoted recent statements by both Trudeau and Turner which singled out the dangers inherent in Canada's faster rising wage rates.

As Sharp stumbled in search of an answer Stanfield asked what the newest statement does to the government's consensus program.

"Can the government properly present a consensus program to the people of Canada before it has achieved consensus in its own ranks," he demanded.

John Fraser (PC-Vancouver South) asked Munro if his statement meant the government now concedes wage demands are only a result of inflation and not a cause of it.

"No," replied Munro.

NDP financial critic Max Saltsman (Waterloo - Cambridge) took up the issue, asking Turner if he shared the Munro view that Canada's strike record is not nearly as bad as it is being made out to be.

Turner replied that he would be dealing with the subject in his June 23 budget, and that he would produce figures at that time.

Saltsman suggested it was a subject of considerable interest since these two opinions are floating around the country — but he agreed it might take some time for the ministers of labor and of finance to reach their own "consensus."

Ford Calms NATO Fears

BRUSSELS (WP) — President Ford Wednesday night began his campaign to relieve fears among America's West European allies that the U.S. withdrawal from Indochina and internal troubles within the Atlantic alliance might mean a lessening of the American commitment to Europe's defences against the Soviet bloc.

Arriving here for a summit meeting of heads of government of the 15 NATO partners, Ford put his immediate stress on reaffirming that "NATO is the cornerstone of U.S. foreign policy and has the unwavering support of the American public and of our Congress, and finally that our commitment to this alliance will not falter."

In the weeks since the collapse of the decade-long U.S. effort to bolster South Vietnam and Cambodia against Communist takeovers, there has been growing unease in Europe about whether the United States might be retreating toward isolationism.

The apprehension was articulated ealier Wednesday by NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns, who told a pre-summit press conference: "Recent developments in Southeast Asia have created uncertainties in some minds which, as far as the alliance is concerned, must be rapidly dispelled. This applies not only to public opinion in our own countries but to the perceptions of any potential adversaries. The alliance is and must be seen to be ready and equipped to perform all of its essential tasks."

Dispelling these fears will be the first priority here for Ford, who is making his first visit to Europe since becoming President last August, and for Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who has been conducting a similar task in Paris this week.

Ford said he hopes to have "some success"; at breaking the middle east stalemate before his European trip is over.

He offered no quick solutions — and got a hint from the Turks not to meddle too much in the Cyprus affair.

Ford held back-to-back meetings with Prime Ministers constantine Caramanlis of Greece and Suleyman Demirel of Turkey, whose nations have been on the brink of war since last summer's Cyprus fighting. Ford offered America's good offices as an intermediary and quickly found out how tough the Cyprus problem can be.

"You cannot say progress was made in these meetings," Arthur Hartman, Assistant Secretary of State for European Affiars, told newsmen after Ford met for 80 minutes each with Caramanlis and Demirel.

B.C.-U.K. Talks June 23

Premier Barrett said Wednesday a June 23 meeting has been arranged with Prime Minister Harold Wilson, of Britain.

The British Information Services offices in Vancouver issued the following press release: "Contrary to a report which appeared in a Vancouver daily newspaper (The Sun) on 28 May, Premier Barrett will call on Prime Minister Wilson in London at 5:30 p.m. on Monday, 23 June.

"A reference to the British Consul-General in Vancouver, who is the British Government's representative in British Columbia, would have confirmed that the appointment was mutually arranged as long ago as 16 may."

Other meetings with British industrialists to discuss a proposed oil refinery in B.C. will take place during the visit, but Barrett said firm dates have not been set.

The exact nature of Barrett's discussions with the U.K. prime minister is not clear, but Barrett said he will be discussing technical and financial matters concerning the $350 million oil refinery.

The premier announced B.C. plans for a refinery last month, however as yet a secure oil supply has not been guaranteed and the exact location is not decided.

ICBC Way Clear For Licences

Motor Vehicle Branch and government agent offices around B.C. will resume full licensing services, despite the continuing Insurance Corporation of B.C. strike.

Transport Minister Bob Strachan said Wednesday the B.C. Government Employees' Union and the Public Service Commission have studied the stiuation and decided there is no conflict in the government continuing its services.

When ICBC's 1,200 employees first went on strike last week, Strachan said government offices would not be able to provide services which would involve automobile insurance policies.

Now, he said, offices will issue new drivers' licences and insurance certificates as well as the whole range of licence plates and driving licences.

Full services will be offered at the Motor Vehicles Branch offices as well as the 43 government agents' outlets.

A government spokesman said today there has been no interruption in normal services offered by the sub-agencies around the province and those services will continue.

He said the continuation of Motor Vehicle Branch services represents no conflict in the ICBC strike because ICBC did not normally handle drivers' certificates.

Branches will not write Autoplan insurance premiums.

Strachan said the directive sent to police officers around the province instructing them not to charge drivers found without valid drivers' certificates has not been rescinded at this time.

He did not indicate whether the order would be withdrawn.

I'm Fed Up with Life: Student

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — A 16-year-old student, whose last note to his parents said he was "fed up with life . . . I am going out to eliminate people," killed his teacher and a fellow student, then committed suicide, in a shooting rampage at his school Wednesday.

Michael Slobodian, a Grade 11 student went to Centennial secondary school in this city northwest of Toronto and killed Margaret Wright, 25, his English and art teacher, John Slinger, 17, and wounded 13 other students before turning a semi-automatic rifle on himself.

Chief Douglas Burrows of Peel regional police said, Slobodian entered the men's washroom of the school at about 11:30 a.m. armed with two rifles-.44-calibre and .22-calibre hidden in a guitar case — and fired at random, killing a student and seriously wounding another.

Chief Burrows said Slobodian then left the washroom and fired in the immediate area, wounding two male students, then fired in the general direction of a home economics' classroom, wounding two female students and one male student.

He proceeded through a first-floor hallway and fired at random in the area of the school's cafeteria, afflicting minor gunshot wounds to six students, and turned towards the art room, fatally shooting Mrs. Wright and seriously wounding two male students.

Then "the gunman turned the gun on himself, inflicting a fatal head wound," the police report said.

Dona Slobodian, 18, sister of Michael, said that "he was perfectly fine. There was nothing wrong with him this morning."

She said her brother, before returning to school from a morning break, wrote a note that he loved his family and was going to kill himself and "eliminate people."

She said Michael left upset because Mrs. Wright had telephoned to say her brother had missed another English class. Dona said he hated English classes.

DOUBLE WIN, BUT NOT FOR RUNNERS

KIMBERLEY (CP) — William Dupuis went home with two new cars after a bingo Saturday night, but the organizers of the event left empty-handed.

Dupuis won the cars for his card with the winning combination of numbers in two successive bingo games. Bill Colthorp, vice-president of the Kimberley Rotary Club, sponsors of the event, said he was flabbergasted with Dupuis taking both the cars when there were 8,000 other cards.

And Colthorp was also surprised to learn Wednesday that the event which grossed over $17,000 narrowly broke even.

As a result, Colthorp said the club will be unable to make any contribution to a $1 million fund for a special care home — the reason the bingo was scheduled.

15TH EXTORTION NETS $30,000

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Provincial Police estimated $30,000 was taken early today in the 15th extortion on financial institutions in Quebec in eight months.

Two attempts to extort $150,000 from Montreal banks each failed Wednesday when money was not picked up from designated drop-off-points.

Police said Roger Patenaude, a Caisse Populaire manager, and his wife were held in their suburban Chateauguay Centre home for four hours late Wednesday night and early today by two men armed with a small calibre revolver.

One man left at 2 a.m., taking the keys to the nearby Caisse Populaire. He telephoned his partner at the manager's house after he had taken the money, police said. The second man left the manager and his wife unharmed.

In one of the unsuccessful extortion attempts Wednesday, a $150,000-dollar payment left in a telephone both by the manager of a downtown branch of the Bank of Montreal was retrieved when extortionists did not appear.

In the second incident Wednesday, police were alerted by 20-year-old Claude Rivard, who had been tied up with his mother and two brothers after thieves broke into the Rivard home shortly after 4 a.m.

VGH Fears Shutdown From LRB Ruling

Victoria General Hospital has appealed a Labor Relations Board ruling, saying that for the first time it raises the spectre of a total hospital shutdown in the event of labor strife.

The LRB ruled earlier this month that five of the hospital's department heads were eligible for membership in the Health Sciences Association, a union which represents paramedical hospital staff and has about 2,500 members across the province.

The hospital had argued that seven of its department heads should be excluded because they were management personnel. The board agreed on two positions but ruled the other five were eligible because while they performed some mangement functions, it was not their "primary function."

There is no indication from the LRB yet whether it will hear the appeal. The hospital wants the entire board to hear its argument against the ruling made by a three-man panel of the board. The LRB has in the past indicated there are few grounds on which it is prepared to hear appeals.

The appeal comes at the same time as the Health Sciences Association in convention last weekend erased from its constitution a clause which precluded members going on stike.

Mike O'Prien, personnel director at Victoria General, said that if the board ruling stands and an HSA strike came about, the hospital would be unable to provide even basic diagnostic services and would in effect be shut down.

In its appeal, the hospital is not contesting the case of the social services department head. The posts at issue are department heads of medical records, pharmacy, phsiotherapy and laboratory technology and the appeal brief includes letters in support from the people holding these positions.

The LRB in its decision said it intended the ruling to stand as a precedent-setting decision for similar situations across the province.

The hospital, represented by Brian Smith, is arguing the LRB ruling changes the role and functions of the department heads involved "and as a practical consequence the hospital will become more bureaucratized and less effectively run."

The department heads involved exercise in varying degrees the functions of hiring, firing, promoting, evaluating, organizing and controlling the work of those under them but will now become mere supervisors, the appeal brief says.

"As members of the union . . . they (cannot) be effectively responsible for disciplining and firing.

"In the assignment of jobs, the pressure will be upon them to base their decisions on seniority — a legitimate union concept in certain areas of employee relations — but a principle which would give rise to inefficiency in the day to day running of the department.

"The other alternative facing the department heads would be to become poor union members, placing the interest of an efficient department above the interests of their fellow union members."

The appeal argues that the LRB ruling made an error in law, one of the grounds on which the LRB says it will hear an appeal, when it said all paramedic hospital department heads in B.C. are "employees" in the absence of special or unusual circumstances.

Gov't-Made Eye Glasses?

The provincial government may move into the production of eyeglasses to keep "oppressive prices" down, Health Minister Dennis Cocke said today.

One solution, he said, is giving financial assistance to a business in the private sector to hold down the price.

Speaking during debate of his department's estimates in the legislature the health minister said recent 20 per cent increases by Imperial Optical is contributing to needlessly high prices.

"There has to be a better way, especially in cases where families are facing bills for eyeglasses for as many as five children."

Cocke promises to keep "soldiering on" and called for federal government to continue its review of optometrics in Canada which he said was going full-tilt before the election but as soon as election was over "we heard nothing more."

Later in debate he said he was still awaiting a department report on the feasibility of establishing a dental care program for children.

Indians End Nanaimo Occupation

NANAIMO — About 30 Nitinat and Port Alberni Indians have ended their three-day occupation of the Indian affairs department office here.

Spokesman Charlie Thompson said the work will be taken over by the South Vancouver Island Indian Federation, but there was no indication if the new group intends to continue the occupation.

William Cook, district supervisor for the indian affairs department, said the office staff was to return to work today. They had been off work since early Monday when the occupation began.

He also said the Indians involved in the sit-in left the office in excellent condition.

WOMAN JAILED

A 22-year-old Vancouver woman was sentenced Wednesday to 18 months in jail for pointing a pistol at Walter Edward Currie.

Christina Hildebrandt had pleaded guilty earlier and was to have been sentenced May 7 but she failed to appear. A warrant for her arrest was issued and she was brought to court Wednesday.

The Crown had earlier withdrawn a two-count charge of forcible confinement against her in an incident at Executive House last November when two Colwood RCMP officers were hogtied and held for two hours.

Cabinet Split

member asked if the budget will be subject to a free vote whereby MPs do not have to vote along party lines.

Stanfield wanted to know if Turner would continue to serve in his portfolio in a government in which another minister had expressed a contrary view.

"I intend to serve as long as the Prime Minister asks me to serve," replied Turner.

Existance of the wide divergence of opinion within cabinet did not surprise many observers, but the fact it had burst into the open did.

The conflict obviously bears heavily on the fiscal stance the government will take in its new budget.

Turner has indicated in recent speeches he is concerned about Canada's loss of competitive position in international markets, and therefore would be expected to present a budget that would recognize inflation as Canada's principle problem.

Other ministers, however, are less desirous of restrictions on government spending and on fiscal and monetary policy.

J. H. Horner (PC-Crowfoot) asked the finance minister if, in an effort to curtail inflation, he would commit himself to increasing the money supply by only five to seven per cent over the next year, as the government has promised in the U.S.

"There are some risks in suggesting a target like that," Turner replied.

The All-Canadian Slob Known to Every Woman

Well, as they say, turn about is only fair play which is why we have Mrs. Pamela McLean, of Beechwood Avenue, with us today. Let's hear it for Pamela.

What's happened is that Pamela, alone among my women readers, agreed with me that Milady shopper in the suburbs contrives to look perfectly awful when she goes to the supermarket, that she's never quite got used to it in the 10 long years since she came here from Britain, but isn't it really the doing of men?

"Could it be that Canadian men get the women they deserve?" she asks. "I am constantly disappointed by the average Canadian male's unromantic attitude to his womenfolk."

Pamela remembers her first Canadian party.

"Newcomer to this country that I was, I looked forward to meeting new friends with fresh ideas and outlooks," she writes. "On the appointed date I ventured forth dressed and perfumed and, I hoped, maybe a little attractive. I had anticipated discussions, stimulating conversation, general repartee. Instead, my previously appreciative husband disappeared from my side like Scotch mist and I became part of a desultory conversation about domesticity. I thought of that experience when I read your claim that Canadian men still cherish femininity. When? Where?"

As you can see, this opens up a rather vast subject, namely the romanticism or the lack of it in Canadian men, and I think we had better agree right here in the beginning that we leave just a little something to be desired in that department. Or, to put it another way, we're duds.

The Canadian house-party, of the kind Pamela describes, is absolutely unique in the whole wide world. If you go to a house-party in, say, Tel-Aviv or Manchester or New Orleans or Rio de Janeiro, you will meet both men and women. The chances are very good that you will dance or that you will have a harmless tete-a-tete in a corner with a handsome dame or that you may even have a mild flirtation, which is very good for men and for women, too, or that you will enjoy in some way the wit or wisdom of the opposite sex.

I have to tell Pamela, who does not seem to have absorbed it in 10 years, that this never happens in Canada. Within the first 10 minutes of a Canadian house-party all of the males will have congregated together, usually in the kitchen. They talk about hockey scores and giant fish and golf handicaps and business problems and they tell each other off-color jokes that are seldom funny and they get zonked with booze.

Meanwhile the ladies are left in the room where the party has begun. They talk about disposable diapers and the cost of butter and the perfectly awful hair dye of the friend who is not at the party and they wish they were dead. Sometimes, usually, they get very cross with their husbands who have zonked and don't speak for several weeks.

To suggest that this is caused by the Canadian male is probably nothing but the truth. Some apologists have gone so far as to suggest that it's the climate, that frigid, lousy weather makes frigid, lousy lovers, but any visitor to almost any Scandinavian country will know better. My own experience, indeed, has indicated that the lower the temperature the higher the Scandinavian capacity for gallantry toward women.

The truth probably goes back to our British Empire Loyalist traditions in which any kind of affection was permissible only behind locked shutters, in which a compliment to a woman or an avowal of admiration or love would be considered a lamentable weakness in the male.

One obvious result of this strait-laced heritage has been the noticeable incapacity of the Canadian male to flirt. In almost any other culture a low voltage electricity between man and woman is accepted as a natural thing. True, it is more apparent in some nations than others. In Italy, for example, a house-party may seem an enormous game, like a duelling match, between male and female. A woman expects a string of compliments, on her appearance, her attire, may even distinguish between the truth and the lies, but rises to her part in the game knowing that it is one of the human animal's more rewarding past-times. Recreate the same situation in any Canadian setting and you can almost bet that somebody is going to get punched in the nose.

It is particularly depressing when it involves man and wife. I honestly can't remember when I last heard a Canadian man utter a flattering word or an expression of adoration in the general direction of his spouse. It is as if there were an unwritten rule that when the marriage ceremony is over the compliments will stop or be replaced by the weapons of irony. It's not that we are any less loving than any other race. We simply never voice it aloud, as every women wants it.

Maybe Pamela is right when she brings it all down to the female shopper at the supermarket. Why get pretty, why put a dab of Chanel No. Five behind your ear lobe, when you know perfectly well that nothing will come of it from those slobs out there?

'Pause Day' Is Slipping Away

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Most Canadians want to see Sunday observed as a common day of rest and leisure but in increasing numbers they are denied the opportunity, Gordon A. Walker, general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance of Canada, said in Victoria Wednesday.

Walker, in an interview following a one-hour meeting with three Victoria aldermen, was referring to the growth of seven-days-a-week trading and the pressures this places on employees and their families who cannot enjoy a "pause day" for refreshment of body, mind and spirit.

When individuals are forced into a pattern of Sunday working it amounts to an infringement of basic human rights, he said, yet the laws of the country offer them no protection.

The Toronto-based LDA official met with a city council sub-committee — Aldermen Malcolm Anderson, Bob Ellis and Bill Tindall — which at the request of Mayor Peter Pollen is studying the problems of Sunday commercialization and beer parlor stripping.

Until the aldermen report their findings to council, probably within two weeks, they are reluctant to discuss what policy they will advocate.

Anderson, however, did concede Wednesday that as "both a big-L and small-l liberal" he does not like to see inflicted on society even more restrictions and prohibitions than already exist.

All too often restrictive legislation designed to counteract one problem only succeeds in creating others, he noted.

Walker told the Times he learned from the aldermen that Victoria's business community has not raised any particular concerns with regard to the present Sunday trading situation.

"They don't seem to want city council to do anything as they apparently feel they can control the problem themselves — which is just fine by us . . . we have no objections to this," he added.

He had informed the committee, however, that certain Ontario municipalities have enacted their own bylaws regulating uniform store hours, statutory holidays and Sundays. And he offered to obtain copies of this legislation for Victoria's guidance.

Walker said the Alliance is primarily concerned with asking provincial governments to update their own legislation relating to Sundays, and to remove the anomalies and confusion which now exist between outdated provincial statutes and the federal Lord's Day Act.

B.C.'s own Lord's Day Act is a virtually meaningless, obsolete document inherited in colonial days from ancient English law, he noted, and is full of archaic references to "bear-baiting" and the prohibited killing of "bustards . . . whatever they are" on Sunday. (A game bird of the quail type, now extinct in England.)

"I feel the government here should ask the people of the province what it is they want to see happening on Sunday, and then introduce legislation to cover that."

Walker said one purpose of his trip to B.C. was to suggest such a policy to Attorney-General Alex Macdonald, but he was unable to see either the attorney-general or his deputy.

Earlier this year, city solicitor Jakob de Villiers informed Victoria city council that requests to the attorney-general's department for a fiat to prosecute, in cases involving violations of the federal act, have usually been denied in recent years.

Even where previously offending firms were brought to court, the fines were so small as to be virtually no deterrent at all. A prosecution of Empress Paints, for example, resulted in a $10 fine.

De Villiers pointed out that Victoria's special city act of 1916 — a unique piece of legislation, similar in some respects to Vancouver's city charter — permits the city to legislate against Sunday trading if it considers that necessary.

The prohibitions could be written into the city's trades licence bylaw.

Man Held In Gun Incident

A 51-year-old man appeared in Victoria provincial court this morning charged with two counts of dangerous use of a firearm following a shooting incident in Saanich Wednesday.

Piara Bal of Abbotsford was remanded to the afternoon court session to obtain an interpreter.

He is accused of using a firearm in a manner dangerous to the safety of Balwinder Bal and Kehar Singh Pannu, both of Victoria.

Saanich police said they received a report about 4 p.m. that a man was firing a shotgun in the front yard of a house at 990 Tolmie.

Cheryl Rogers, 912 Selkirk, one of those who called police, said she was visiting a friend's place across the street when she saw a man and woman arguing in the front yard. The woman was apparently trying to push the man away.

She said he was carrying a gun and when the woman ran back into the house he began firing at the upstairs windows.

"I was stunned. I stood there and said this can't be for real.

"It sounded like a popgun; there were three shots."

Police said one of the shots went into the air, the other two shattered windows in an upstairs kitchen and bedroom.

Miss Rogers said after the shooting the woman reappeared and tried to wrestle the gun from the man. He threw it to the ground and was starting to walk off when police cars from both Victoria and Saanich police departments arrived.

The man was arrested without a struggle.

Though there were several people in the house at the time of the shooting, no one was injured, a police spokesman said.

Saanich Det. Insp. Charles Truit praised the neighbors for their quick response in calling police.

City Houses 3rd Highest

Victoria house prices are the third highest in Canada, up from fifth-highest in December, according to a national survey released today.

The higher placement, however, was more the result of relatively stable house prices elsewhere rather than a dramatic increase in the price of homes here.

Vancouver continues to be the most expensive city in which to buy a house, according to the survey by Coast to Coast Real Estate Service, a division of A. E. LePage Ltd. of Toronto.

Toronto continues in second place and Victoria moves into third ahead of Ottawa and Kitchener.

The latest survey, showing prices as they were on April 1, has Montreal a lowly 18th on the list.

A house that would cost $50,000 in Montreal would cost $95,000 in Vancouver. The same Montreal house would cost $88,000 in Toronto and $79,500 in Victoria.

It would cost $73,000 in Ottawa, $71,000 in Oshawa, $70,000 in Guelph, $69,000 in Calgary, $66,500 in Kitchener $65,500 in Edmonton and $63,500 in Barrie, Ont.

A total of 26 cities are included in the survey but the list contains only Victoria and Vancouver from British Columbia.

The list is published every three months and is designed to assist companies calculate appropriate compensation for employees who are being transferred.

The company says location and other factors make house prices vary across a city but a standard three-bedroom home in a fairly good location is taken as the base unit.

The survey showed the gap between the highest prices and lowest prices on the list was narrowing because house prices are rising faster in areas where they have been traditionally law, such as the prairies and the Maritimes.

Man Fined $300 Over Explosives

A Langford man was fined $300 today in county court on a charge of illegal possession of explosives last Aug. 30.

Judge Montague Drake in passing sentence on Roderick Welford MacKenzie, 2638 Florence Lake, commented the accused acted "ridiculous, out of character," and was possibly moved by "unaccustomed intake of liquor" when he put primacord and detonators near Gordon's Towing, 1618 Store.

Defence counsel said MacKenzie was of excellent character and his conduct was inconsistent with his normal behavior.

MacKenzie originally pleaded not guilty to planting an explosive device likely to cause serious property damage, but changed his plea when the new charge was substituted.

Guards to Follow Grievance Rules

The Vancouver Island prison guards local of the B.C. Government Employees' Union will take its grievances against the union's provincial executive through normal grievance procedures, a union spokesman said today.

The 150-member local, which believed it had been placed under trusteeship by the provincial executive met with the business representative for the correctional component of the BCGEU Thursday night in Victoria.

The spokesman said there had been a "communications problem" about the trusteeship issue which has now been cleared up. The local is not under trusteeship, but the provincial executive has launched an investigation and is scheduling a hearing which could result in trusteeship.

The prison guards have been fighting with the executive for about six months to have auxiliary guards classified as regular employees.

The local spokesman said earlier the provincial executive had ignored the problem of the auxiliaries. The threat of trusteeship came after the prison guards took their problems to the news media rather than going through the internal grievance procedures set out in the union's bylaws.

The prison guards say the auxiliaries do the same work as regular employees and should be classified as regulars.

No Charges Against Graduates

Colwood RCMP have decided not to lay charges in connection with a student after-graduation party last Friday at Juan de Fuca arena, a police spokesman said today.

Earlier this week a detachment spokesman said "a few charges" were pending following a bottle-smashing fracas to which police were summoned early Saturday.

Police said today they have decided it would be unfair to single out a few youths and charge them with drinking under age when other students were also involved.

The spokesman said that when police arrived at the party about 1 a.m. the whole situation was too confused to be sure just who was responsible for the drinking.

Peter Kappel, Spectrum community school student council president, said a group of concerned students went to talk to arena manager Doug Ruttan this week and were told damages from the party would amount only to about $50.

The party was not an official school function, said Kappel, who added that the six individuals involved were party crashers and not Spectrum students.

Prisoners and teen-agers discover easy relationship

Prisoners Help Teen-Agers

They Relate Quickly Says Youth Worker

By PETER MEDWID
Times Staff

Fifteen guys and a gal are on "a head trip."

The gal is Molly Kelly of the Vic West Neighborhood Centre, the guys are inmates of William Head prison and they have joined forces to help young and older teenagers in Vic West get it all together.

It all started six months ago when Kelly visited the prison to talk to the Optimum Group — convicts who go out into the community to help others.

"While I was talking to them I saw that there was a great potential . . . a potential to help us in our program at the centre," Kelly said.

She took the initiative and asked prison officials if some kind of exchange system could be worked out. She presented them with a program "and they (prison officials) accepted our ideas."

Earlier this year members of the Optimum Group fixed up the neighborhood centre doing carpentry, replacing windows and doing alterations.

For the last month-and-a-half two convicts come to the Craigflower Road centre to help with the program," talking to the kids and assisting with projects.

"When a new teenager comes to the centre it could take up to four months to get that person's trust," says Kelly, "but these guys don't have any trouble in relating to the teenager or the teenager relating to them.

"It really has made our job easier . . . they are on a one-to-one basis with the teenagers and it's really great to see the results.

"It shows that if given a chance kids can learn something from the cons and the prisoners feel they are benefiting by the help they can give others."

Kelly said that when members of the Optimum Group come to the centre they are supervised at all times.

Kelly related the story of one teenager who had problems, and was adopting a life style that would eventually have placed him in William Head or some other prison. Kelly said she tried for a year and a half to 'get to him.' He was taken to the prison and "placed on the hot seat" and all 15 members of the group talked to him.

"You should see the difference . . . this boy has come around a 180 degrees and that is terrific."

As well as the prisoners coming to the centre they also have exchange programs where the Vic West teenagers go to William Head to play floor hockey and baseball.

Every Monday night Kelly takes five children from the Neighborhood Centre to attend Optimum meetings at William Head.

"The cons are great and have a lot to offer the younger people," added Kelly.

Pressure Kills $1.5M Saving

OTTAWA (CP) — Responding to pressure from private employment agencies and to resistance from within the federal bureaucracy, the government has cut drastically a new staffing program which potentially could save the taxpayers more than $1.5 million a year.

A plan by the Public Service Commission (PSC) to establish a pool of temporary workers to fill in as secretaries, typists, stenographers and clerks in the 78,000-member Ottawa-area civil service work force has been scaled down to include three government departments instead of 12 as originally planned.

Officials say opposition from private employment agencies which now provide the government with temporary help at premiums of up to 33 1-3 per cent of the worker's salary and reluctance by some departments to abandon their dealings with the agencies have reduced the staffing program to a modest experiment.

Under the plan, which has worked successfully in the governments of Ontario and Alberta, the PSC, the federal hiring agency, would hire a pool of temporary workers to fill in for full-time secretaries, typists or others who take language courses, go on holidays, fall ill or leave their posts for other reasons.

Kenneth Sinclair, PSC capital region director, said Ontario claimed a saving of $1.5 million and Alberta, $250,000, in the first year of temporary staffing programs.

The federal government could save as much as Ontario or more in the capital area alone if it did not have to pay an estimated $7 million to $9 million a year in salaries and premiums to the private employment agencies, he said. Up to $3 million of this amount goes to the agencies as referral premiums, he said.

There are 13 private personnel companies operating in Ottawa, about half surviving solely on government business, Sinclair said. On any given day about 2,000 temporary workers employed by these companies report to jobs in various government departments.

The departments are reluctant to abandon the system because the temporary workers do not show up on their books as staff. The personnel companies can be paid from budgets used to hire outside consultants or from contingency funds.

Overpayments By UIC Total $31.1 Million

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment insurance overpayments to claimants totalling $31.1 million were outstanding in April, Guy Cousineau, chairman of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, said Wednesday.

Cousineau told a meeting of the Commons Manpower Committee that about $15.1 million in overpayments had been collected since the start of 1975, reducing slightly an overpayment level that stood at $31.3 million at the end of 1974.

There were 889 fines in 1074 due to cases of fraud of the Unemployment Insurance Fund.

Ottawa to Study Air Fares

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will study domestic passenger fare structures on national air and rail lines, Transport Minister Jean Marchand said Wednesday.

"We can say in general that short-haul trips now are subsidized by long-haul trips," Marchand told Don Munro (PC- Esquimalt-Saanich) in the Commons.

"The subsidization of certain areas in Canada . . . takes place not only in the airlines but even with the railways," he said. "This is something we are looking into."

He said that in some cases such subsidization might not be justified.

"It is a situation that we are trying to set right. This would require a total rearrangement of thought . . . in the department itself and the Canadian Transport Commission."

Marchand indicated however, that he will not intervene and seek a reduction of the new domestic air fares, which went into effect Tuesday.

Asked by Don Mazankowski (PC-Vegreville) if he approves of the increases, Marchand replied that he had asked Air Canada to reduce some of the proposed increases and "I think they did reduce those increases in the Maritime region."

"Apart from that, I am not the one who is supposed to be the judge of that. It is the responsibility of the CTC."

Mazankowski then called for an inquiry into "the mass cross-subsidization which is taking place in the operations of Air Canada at the expense of the western air traveller."

The transport commission Monday upheld the third domestic air fare increase by Air Canada and CP Air in two years.

PM's Aide Under Suspicion

OTTAWA (CP) — An attempt was made in the Commons Wednesday to suspend Prime Minister Trudeau's principal secretary until allegations that he is using the office to gather information for a personal tax dispute are investigated.

But Tom Cossitt (PC—Leeds) was unsuccessful in getting the required unanimous consent to propose a motion involving Jack Austin.

Austin, 43-year-old former deputy minister of energy, became Trudeau's principal secretary last year. It was revealed recently that he has written to former business associates about a dispute with the revenue department. Although the letterhead simply said "J. Austin, QC," he said he could be reached for further information at his East Block office, and he provided the telephone number of the prime minister's department.

In the Commons, Cossitt referred to the "serious allegations" that Austin "has been using the prime minister's office as an information gathering centre to fight a $70,000 personal tax case. . . ."

He requested permission to present a motion calling on Austin to . . . "remain absent from his duties or otherwise be suspended until such time as the allegations are disproved or otherwise."

After Vancouver Sun columnist Allan Fotheringham ran a list of questions about Austin's alleged business interests, the principal secretary said he was consulting his lawyers.

"I don't want to influence my lawyers and I don't want to make any moves without their advice," was his response to reporters."

Little Interest On $1.5B

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians have lent almost $1.5 billion to 57 countries and a couple of agencies in the last 10 years for little or no interest, figures released in the Commons show.

In nine of those years, the Export Development Corp., the Crown agency that lends money at commercial rates to permit purchases of Canadian products, lent almost $1.4 billion to 44 countries or companies in those countries.

The figures also show that India was by far the largest borrower in the period, with loans, that carry no interest or commercial interest rates, approaching nearly $500 million.

The figures for the period 1965-1974 were tabled in the Commons this week by External Affairs Minister Allan Mcnal Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen in answer to a question on the Commons order paper from J. Robert Gauthier (Liberal—Ottawa Vanier).

Gauthier asked for figures for 1965 to 1973 but the figures released also included those for 1974.

The total of 236—no—or low-interest loans was provided through the Canadian International Development Agency, the national aid agency.

A total of 202 of these loans had no interest, 33 for three per cent interest and one — $3.5 million for Nigeria—for six per cent.

Most provlided a 10- or seven-year grace period before the first payment had to be made and most called for 80 semi-annual payments over 40 years or 46 over 23 years.

India borrowed almost $408.5 million, all at no interest, in 27 loans, the figures show. This represents the largest amount and the largest number of loans in the figures.

Pakistan was second in amount with almost $192.1 million in 21 loans. Jamaica had the second largest number of loans, 25 amounting to $21.8 million.

The All-Canadian Slob Known to Every Woman

Well, as they say, turn about is only fair play which is why we have Mrs. Pamela McLean, of Beechwood Avenue, with us today. Let's hear it for Pamela.

What's happened is that Pamela, alone among my women readers, agreed with me that Milady shopper in the suburbs contrives to look perfectly awful when she goes to the supermarket, that she's never quite got used to it in the 10 long years since she came here from Britain, but isn't it really the doing of men?

"Could it be that Canadian men get the women they deserve?" she asks. "I am constantly disappointed by the average Canadian male's unromantic attitude to his womenfolk."

Pamela remembers her first Canadian party.

"Newcomer to this country that I was, I looked forward to meeting new friends with fresh ideas and outlooks," she writes. "On the appointed date I ventured forth dressed and perfumed and, I hoped, maybe a little attractive. I had anticipated discussions, stimulating conversation, general repartee. Instead, my previously appreciative husband disappeared from my side like Scotch mist and I became part of a desultory conversation about domesticity. I thought of that experience when I read your claim that Canadian men still cherish femininity. When? Where?"

As you can see, this opens up a rather vast subject, namely the romanticism or the lack of it in Canadian men, and I think we had better agree right here in the beginning that we leave just a little something to be desired in that department. Or, to put it another way, we're duds.

The Canadian house-party, of the kind Pamela describes, is absolutely unique in the whole wide world. If you go to a house-party in, say, Tel-Aviv or Manchester or New Orleans or Rio de Janeiro, you will meet both men and women. The chances are very good that you will dance or that you will have a harmless tete-a-tete in a corner with a handsome dame or that you may even have a mild flirtation, which is very good for men and for women, too, or that you will enjoy in some way the wit or wisdom of the opposite sex.

I have to tell Pamela, who does not seem to have absorbed it in 10 years, that this never happens in Canada. Within the first 10 minutes of a Canadian house-party all of the males will have congregated together, usually in the kitchen. They talk about hockey scores and giant fish and golf handicaps and business problems and they tell each other off-color jokes that are seldom funny and they get zonked with booze.

Meanwhile the ladies are left in the room where the party has begun. They talk about disposable diapers and the cost of butter and the perfectly awful hair dye of the friend who is not at the party and they wish they were dead. Sometimes, usually, they get very cross with their husbands who have zonked and don't speak for several weeks.

To suggest that this is caused by the Canadian male is probably nothing but the truth. Some apologists have gone so far as to suggest that it's the climate, that frigid, lousy weather makes frigid, lousy lovers, but any visitor to almost any Scandinavian country will know better. My own experience, indeed, has indicated that the lower the temperature the higher the Scandinavian capacity for gallantry toward women.

The truth probably goes back to our British Empire Loyalist traditions in which any kind of affection was permissible only behind locked shutters, in which a compliment to a woman or an avowal of admiration or love would be considered a lamentable weakness in the male.

One obvious result of this strait-laced heritage has been the noticeable incapacity of the Canadian male to flirt. In almost any other culture a low voltage electricity between man and woman is accepted as a natural thing. True, it is more apparent in some nations than others. In Italy, for example, a house-party may seem an enormous game, like a duelling match, between male and female. A woman expects a string of compliments, on her appearance, her attire, may even distinguish between the truth and the lies, but rises to her part in the game knowing that it is one of the human animal's more rewarding past-times. Recreate the same situation in any Canadian setting and you can almost bet that somebody is going to get punched in the nose.

It is particularly depressing when it involves man and wife. I honestly can't remember when I last heard a Canadian man utter a flattering word or an expression of adoration in the general direction of his spouse. It is as if there were an unwritten rule that when the marriage ceremony is over the compliments will stop or be replaced by the weapons of irony. It's not that we are any less loving than any other race. We simply never voice it aloud, as every women wants it.

Maybe Pamela is right when she brings it all down to the female shopper at the supermarket. Why get pretty, why put a dab of Chanel No. Five behind your ear lobe, when you know perfectly well that nothing will come of it from those slobs out there?

'Pause Day' Is Slipping Away

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Most Canadians want to see Sunday observed as a common day of rest and leisure but in increasing numbers they are denied the opportunity, Gordon A. Walker, general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance of Canada, said in Victoria Wednesday.

Walker, in an interview following a one-hour meeting with three Victoria aldermen, was referring to the growth of seven-days-a-week trading and the pressures this places on employees and their families who cannot enjoy a "pause day" for refreshment of body, mind and spirit.

When individuals are forced into a pattern of Sunday working it amounts to an infringement of basic human rights, he said, yet the laws of the country offer them no protection.

The Toronto-based LDA official met with a city council sub-committee — Aldermen Malcolm Anderson, Bob Ellis and Bill Tindall — which at the request of Mayor Peter Pollen is studying the problems of Sunday commercialization and beer parlor stripping.

Until the aldermen report their findings to council, probably within two weeks, they are reluctant to discuss what policy they will advocate.

Anderson, however, did concede Wednesday that as "both a big-L and small-l liberal" he does not like to see inflicted on society even more restrictions and prohibitions than already exist.

All too often restrictive legislation designed to counteract one problem only succeeds in creating others, he noted.

Walker told the Times he learned from the aldermen that Victoria's business community has not raised any particular concerns with regard to the present Sunday trading situation.

"They don't seem to want city council to do anything as they apparently feel they can control the problem themselves — which is just fine by us . . . we have no objections to this," he added.

He had informed the committee, however, that certain Ontario municipalities have enacted their own bylaws regulating uniform store hours, statutory holidays and Sundays. And he offered to obtain copies of this legislation for Victoria's guidance.

Walker said the Alliance is primarily concerned with asking provincial governments to update their own legislation relating to Sundays, and to remove the anomalies and confusion which now exist between outdated provincial statutes and the federal Lord's Day Act.

B.C.'s own Lord's Day Act is a virtually meaningless, obsolete document inherited in colonial days from ancient English law, he noted, and is full of archaic references to "bear-baiting" and the prohibited killing of "bustards . . . whatever they are" on Sunday. (A game bird of the quail type, now extinct in England.)

"I feel the government here should ask the people of the province what it is they want to see happening on Sunday, and then introduce legislation to cover that."

Walker said one purpose of his trip to B.C. was to suggest such a policy to Attorney-General Alex Macdonald, but he was unable to see either the attorney-general or his deputy.

Earlier this year, city solicitor Jakob de Villiers informed Victoria city council that requests to the attorney-general's department for a fiat to prosecute, in cases involving violations of the federal act, have usually been denied in recent years.

Even where previously offending firms were brought to court, the fines were so small as to be virtually no deterrent at all. A prosecution of Empress Paints, for example, resulted in a $10 fine.

De Villiers pointed out that Victoria's special city act of 1916 — a unique piece of legislation similar in some respects to Vancouver's city charter — permits the city to legislate against Sunday trading if it considers that necessary.

The prohibitions could be written into the city's trades licence bylaw.

City Houses 3rd Highest

Victoria house prices are the third highest in Canada, up from fifth-highest in December, according to a national survey released today.

The higher placement, however, was more the result of relatively stable house prices elsewhere rather than a dramatic increase in the price of homes here.

Vancouver continues to be the most expensive city in which to buy a house, according to the survey by Coast to Coast Real Estate Service, a division of A. E. LePage Ltd. of Toronto.

Toronto continues in second place and Victoria moves into third ahead of Ottawa and Kitchener.

The latest survey, showing prices as they were on April 1, has Montreal a lowly 18th on the list.

A house that would cost $50,000 in Montreal would cost $95,000 in Vancouver. The same Montreal house would cost $88,000 in Toronto and $79,500 in Victoria.

It would cost $73,000 in Ottawa, $71,000 in Oshawa, $70,000 in Guelph, $69,000 in Calgary, $66,500 in Kitchener $65,500 in Edmonton and $63,500 in Barrie, Ont.

A total of 26 cities are included in the survey but the list contains only Victoria and Vancouver from British Columbia.

The list is published every three months and is designed to assist companies calculate appropriate compensation for employees who are being transferred.

The company says location and other factors make house prices vary across a city but a standard three-bedroom home in a fairly good location is taken as the base unit.

The survey showed the gap between the highest prices and lowest prices on the list was narrowing because house prices are rising faster in areas where they have been traditionally low, such as the prairies and the Maritimes.

Man Fined $300 Over Explosives

A Langford man was fined $300 today in county court on a charge of illegal possession of explosives last Aug. 30.

Judge Montague Drake in passing sentence on Roderick Welford MacKenzie, 2638 Florence Lake, commented the accused acted "ridiculous, out of character," and was possibly moved by "unaccustomed intake of liquor."

Defence counsel said MacKenzie was of excellent character and his conduct was inconsistent with his normal behavior.

MacKenzie originally pleaded not guilty to planting prima cord and detonators likely to cause damage to property on the parking lot of Gordon's Towing, 1618 Store, last Aug. 30, but changed his plea when the new charge was substituted.

Guards to Follow Grievance Rules

The Vancouver Island prison guards local of the B.C. Government Employees' Union will take its grievances against the union's provincial executive through normal grievance procedures, a union spokesman said today.

The 150-member local, which believed it had been placed under trusteeship by the provincial executive met with the business representative for the correctional component of the BCGEU Thursday night in Victoria.

The spokesman said there had been a "communications problem" about the trusteeship issue which has now been cleared up. The local is not under trusteeship, but the provincial executive has launched an investigation and is scheduling a hearing which could result in trusteeship.

The prison guards have been fighting with the executive for about six months to have auxiliary guards classified as regular employees.

The local spokesman said earlier the provincial executive had ignored the problem of the auxiliaries. The threat of trusteeship came after the prison guards took their problems to the news media rather than going through the internal grievance procedures set out in the union's bylaws.

The prison guards say the auxiliaries do the same work as regular employees and should be classified as regulars.

Man Held In Gun Incident

A 51-year-old man appeared in Victoria provincial court this morning charged with two counts of dangerous use of a firearm following a shooting incident in Saanich Wednesday.

Piara Bal of Abbotsford was remanded to the afternoon court session to obtain an interpreter.

He is accused of using a firearm in a manner dangerous to the safety of Balwinder Bal and Kehar Singh Pannu, both of Victoria.

Saanich police said they received a report about 4 p.m. that a man was firing a shotgun in the front yard of a house at 990 Tolmie.

Cheryl Rogers, 912 Selkirk, one of those who called police, said she was visiting a friend's place across the street when she saw a man and woman arguing in the front yard. The woman was apparently trying to push the man away.

She said he was carrying a gun and when the woman ran back into the house he began firing at the upstairs windows.

"I was stunned. I stood there and said this can't be for real.

"It sounded like a popgun; there were three shots."

Police said one of the shots went into the air, the other two shattered windows in an upstairs kitchen and bedroom.

Miss Rogers said after the shooting the woman reappeared and tried to wrestle the gun from the man. He threw it to the ground and was starting to walk off when police cars from both Victoria and Saanich police departments arrived.

The man was arrested without a struggle.

Though there were several people in the house at the time of the shooting, no one was injured, a police spokesman said.

Saanich Det. Insp. Charles Truit praised the neighbors for their quick response in calling police.

No Charges Against Graduates

Colwood RCMP have decided not to lay charges in connection with a student after-graduation party last Friday at Juan de Fuca arena, a police spokesman said today.

Earlier this week a detachment spokesman said "a few charges" were pending following a bottle-smashing fracas to which police were summoned early Saturday.

Police said today they have decided it would be unfair to single out a few youths and charge them with drinking under age when other students were also involved.

The spokesman said that when police arrived at the party about 1 a.m. the whole situation was too confused to be sure just who was responsible for the drinking.

Peter Kappel, Spectrum community school student council president, said a group of concerned students went to talk to arena manager Doug Ruttan this week and were told damages from the party would amount only to about $50.

The party was not an official school function, said Kappel, who added that the six individuals involved were party crashers and not Spectrum students.

Prisoners and teen-agers discover easy relationship

Prisoners Help Teen-Agers

They Relate Quickly Says Youth Worker

Fifteen guys and a gal are on "a head trip."

The gal is Molly Kelly of the Vic West Neighborhood Centre, the guys are inmates of William Head prison and they have joined forces to help young and older teenagers in Vic West get it all together.

It all started six months ago when Kelly visited the prison to talk to the Optimum Group — convicts who go out into the community to help others.

"While I was talking to them I saw that there was a great potential . . . a potential to help us in our program at the centre," Kelly said.

She took the initiative and asked prison officials if some kind of exchange system could be worked out. She presented them with a program "and they (prison officials) accepted our ideas."

Earlier this year members of the Optimum Group fixed up the neighborhood centre doing carpentry, replacing windows and doing alterations.

For the last month-and-a-half two convicts come to the Craigflower Road centre to help with the program, talking to the kids and assisting with projects.

"When a new teenager comes to the centre it could take up to four months to get that person's trust," says Kelly, "but these guys don't have any trouble in relating to the teenager or the teenager relating to them.

"It really has made our job easier . . . they are on a one-to-one basis with the teenagers and it's really great to see the results.

"It shows that if given a chance kids can learn something from the cons and the prisoners feel they are benefiting by the help they can give others."

Kelly said that when members of the Optimum Group come to the centre they are supervised at all times.

Kelly related the story of one teenager who had problems, and was adopting a life style that would eventually have placed him in William Head or some other prison. Kelly said she tried for a year and a half to 'get to him.' He was taken to the prison and "placed on the hot seat" and all 15 members of the group talked to him.

"You should see the difference . . . this boy has come around a 180 degrees and that is terrific."

As well as the prisoners coming to the centre they also have exchange programs where the Vic West teenagers go to William Head to play floor hockey and baseball.

Every Monday night Kelly takes five children from the Neighborhood Centre to attend Optimum meetings at William Head.

"The cons are great and have a lot to offer the younger people," added Kelly.

And this is the kind of "head trip" that can be useful in other centres in Greater Victoria.
